ABOUT THIS BOOK

The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma: A Demographic Study by Peter J. Potichnyj and Peter J. Yakob has been published online by the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies (CIUS) and the Ukraina Moderna website (<https://uamoderna.com/>; operated by the CIUS's Petro Jacyk Program for the Study of Modern Ukrainian History and Society), in cooperation with the Institute of Historical Research at Lviv National University and the Manuskrypt Publishers.

This book is intended for private use by individuals interested in their family history as well as by researchers and scholars in pursuit of historical, demographic, societal, family-structural, and similar research.

The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma may be downloaded at no cost by individuals and/or academic organizations. However, this book shall not be reproduced in full or in part and/or translated without written consent from the publisher. All rights are reserved.

Readers are encouraged to use the Search function to locate specific information such as surnames, PPINs, locations, biographical or historical information etc.

Several of the appendices were generated using Excel© spreadsheet technology prior to conversion to PDFs. Individuals interested in file linkage or in further analysis and data manipulation should convert the appendixes back to a spreadsheet format. Once converted, users can reinsert formulas to generate American Soundex Numbers, generate PPINs, and use pivot table functions. Linkage tools can also be developed.

The authors included all available birth, marriage, death and immigration records at the time of publication. Additional records continuously become available through online genealogy sites as well as through family sites. Users are encouraged to share new information with other readers.

Readers interested in furthering research should consider the growing technology of DNA analysis. Previously unknown family relationships can be developed when DNA samples are developed.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We thank the many individuals who supported or collaborated with us to bring this project to completion, including Zenon Potichnyj and the Pavlokoma Foundation. We are grateful to Robert Parsons, Adriana Potichnyj, John A. Yakob, and Paul J. Yakob for their technical support. We also extend our thanks to Gordon Beck, director and map specialist, and Christine Homuth, spatial information specialist, at the Lloyd Reeds Map Collection at McMaster University's Mills Memorial Library in Hamilton, Ontario.

Ol'ha Koshtovs'ka-Chervins'ka shared with us her unique knowledge of Pavlokoma's neighbourhoods and their residents; and Olena Fedak-Potichnyj, Oleksandra Fedak-Potichnyj, Ivan Fedak, and many others provided us with assistance.

We are grateful to the staff of the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies (CIUS), particularly to Roman Senkus, senior editor; Professor Frank E. Sysyn, director of the Peter Jacyk Centre for Ukrainian Historical Research; and Dr. Marko Robert Stech, director of CIUS Press and scholarly publications. We also extend our thanks to the members of the CIUS Lviv Office, Professor Yaroslav Hrytsak, Oksana Dmyterko, and Ihor Stakhiv. Our work was generously supported by the Dr. Demetrius and Maria Todosijczuk Memorial Fund at the CIUS.

Finally, we are indebted to our wives, Tamara and Janet, for their patience and dedication.

INTRODUCTION

Demographers, historians, archaeologists, sociologists, anthropologists, statisticians, genealogists, and even poets who wish to know more about their heritage or past populations typically have one thing in common: a profound interest in preserving the history and memories of their forefathers, families, and the towns and villages where they lived. Without these individuals' curiosity, passion, and hard work, details about the past would be lost to future generations. It is almost a part of human nature to preserve in writing or orally the record of our existence. One can only imagine how much more of human history would enlighten us today had all the records in libraries and archives survived.

Hundreds of towns and villages in Eastern Europe suffered devastation during and immediately after World War II. Since then, – historical demographers have since joined the ranks of scholars and academics to ensure that the histories of past populations are not lost. Louis Henry (1911–91), the founder of historical demography, developed tools and procedures for researchers to create advanced studies of past populations.

The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma: A Demographic Study was written to further historical-demography research on Pavlokoma (Polish name: Pawłokoma), the formerly predominantly ethnic Ukrainian village where our forebears were born. The village was located near the San River on territory that has belonged to Poland since 1918. Written records date back to 1441. For generations Pavlokoma's Ukrainian and Polish inhabitants intermarried and lived in harmony despite their different faiths and customs. The Ruthenian/Ukrainian Greek Catholic and Polish Roman Catholic Churches kept records of the births, marriages, and deaths of their respective parishioners in the village from the sixteenth century on.

Pavlokoma's records were destroyed or became otherwise lost to scholars and researchers. On 3 March 1945, 366 of the village's Ukrainian inhabitants were brutally murdered by soldiers of the Polish Armia Krajowa (Home Army) with the collaboration of the villagers' Polish neighbours. This Ukrainian village's march to oblivion continued for several more years, especially once the Soviet-backed Polish government implemented so-called Akcja Wisła (Operation Vistula) from April through July 1947. During these early postwar years, several thousand Galician Ukrainian and Lemko villagers were expelled from their ancestral homes. Many of the villages they had inhabited were completely destroyed or resettled by ethnic Poles, and Ukrainian civil and church records were destroyed or removed from public access. Consequently, the ethnic Ukrainian village of Pavlokoma no longer exists. Instead, for over seventy-five years it has been supplanted by the Polish village of Pawłokoma.

The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma is an attempt at recovering the demographic records of individuals who called Pavlokoma their home so that they can serve the needs of the various scholarly disciplines listed above. The village's birth, marriage, and death records exist in various Polish, Ukrainian, German, Austrian, Hungarian, Russian, and perhaps other archives. Their access and collections constitute the foundation for studying families and individuals who lived in Pavlokoma. Several sources with information about Pavlokoma's diaspora—primarily U.S. and Canadian immigration, census, and naturalization records—were also collated. However, the authors did not have an opportunity to examine similar sources in other countries to which persons from Pavlokoma also immigrated, such as Argentina, Brazil, and Australia.

The primary method of capturing data was to develop spreadsheets of the births of all former residents of Pavlokoma, be they Ukrainian, Polish, or Jewish. Some metrical records are available, most of them Greek Catholic ones preserved in the State Archive in Przemyśl, Poland, and Lviv, Ukraine. They cover the 1784–1843 and mid-1886–1945 periods respectively. Further estimates of births were gathered from the ages of persons listed in migration records. Every attempt was made to treat each entry as a unique individual, and a Pavlokoma Personal Identification Number (PPIN) system was created for each villager, consisting of a unique variable string with an individual's American Soundex code, the initial of their first name, their gender, and the last three digits of their birth year. The PPIN permits data from various spreadsheets to be linked, searched, and combined, thus providing rigorous documentation for a given individual. We believe the PPINs will provide historical demographers and other researchers with a tool for in-depth longitudinal and cross-sectional studies about individuals, families, and various population cohorts. We also believe that the historical-demographic data in this study will serve as a model for researching other Galician Ukrainian villages; and that demographers will be able to use the results to draw in-depth and valid conclusions regarding demographic topics of interest to them.

We did not attempt to undertake extensive analyses of fertility or mortality. However, we present an overview of these and other demographic topics and make relevant observations. It is hoped that future researchers will benefit from the information presented in this study.

ВСТУП

Демографи, історики, археологи, соціологи, антропологи, статистики, генеалоги та навіть поети, які бажають дізнатися більше про свою спадщину чи минуле населення, як правило, мають одну спільну рису: глибокий інтерес до збереження історії та пам'яті своїх предків, родин, і міст і сіл, де вони жили. Без цікавості, пристрасті та наполегливої праці цих людей подробиці про минуле були б втрачені для майбутніх поколінь. Це майже частина людської природи – зберігати в письмовій чи усній формі записи про наше існування. Можна тільки уявити, скільки б історії людства прояснило нам сьогодні, якби всі записи в бібліотеках і архівах збереглися.

Сотні міст і сіл у Східній Європі зазнали руйнувань під час і відразу після Другої світової війни. Відтоді історичні демографи приєдналися до рядів вчених і академіків, щоб гарантувати, що історії минулого населення не будуть втрачені. Луїс Генрі (1911–1991), засновник історичної демографії, розробив інструменти та процедури для дослідників, щоб створити передові дослідження минулого населення.

«Українське село Павлокома: демографічне дослідження» було написано з метою подальших історико-демографічних досліджень Павлокоми (польська назва: Павлокома), колишнього переважно етнічного українського села, де народилися наші предки. Село було розташоване біля річки Сан на території, яка з 1918 року належала Польщі. Писемні згадки датуються 1441 роком. Поколіннями українські та польські жителі Павлокоми брали шлюби та жили в злагоді, незважаючи на різну віру та звичаї. Руська/Українська Греко-Католицька та Польська Римо-Католицька Церкви вели записи про народження, одруження та смерть своїх парафіян у селі з XVI ст.

Записи Павлокоми були знищені або іншим чином втрачені для вчених і дослідників. 3 березня 1945 року 366 українських мешканців села було по-звірячому вбито вояками польської Армії Крайової за участю сусідів-поляків. Марш цього українського села до забуття тривав ще кілька років, особливо після того, як підтримуваний Радянським Союзом польський уряд здійснив так звану «Акцію Вісла» (операція «Вісла») з квітня по липень 1947 року. У ці перші післявоєнні роки кілька тисяч галицьких українців і лемківських селян були виселені. вигнали зі своїх предків. Багато сіл, які вони населяли, були повністю зруйновані або переселені етнічними поляками, а українські цивільні та церковні записи були знищені або вилучені з загального доступу. Отже, етнічного українського села Павлокома вже не існує. Натомість уже понад сімдесят п'ять років його витісняє польське село Павлокома.

Українське село Павлокома – це спроба відновити демографічні записи людей, які називали Павлокому своїм домом, щоб вони могли служити потребам різних наукових дисциплін, перелічених вище. Записи про народження, одруження та смерть села є в різних польських, українських, німецьких, австрійських, угорських, російських та, можливо, інших архівах. Їх доступ і колекції є основою для вивчення сімей та окремих осіб, які жили в Павлокомі. Також було зібрано кілька джерел з інформацією про діаспору Павлокоми – насамперед імміграцію в США та Канаду, перепис населення та записи про натуралізацію. Однак автори не мали можливості дослідити подібні джерела в інших країнах, куди також емігрували вихідці з Павлокоми, таких як Аргентина, Бразилія та Австралія.

Основним методом збору даних була розробка електронних таблиць народжень усіх колишніх мешканців Павлокоми, будь то українці, поляки чи євреї. Деякі метричні записи, більшість з них греко-католицькі, зберігаються в Державному архіві в Перемишлі (Польща) та Львові (Україна). Вони охоплюють періоди 1784–1843 та середини 1886–1945 років відповідно. Подальші оцінки народжуваності були зібрані на основі віку осіб, зазначених у міграційних записах. Були зроблені всі спроби розглядати кожен запис як унікальну особистість, і для кожного селянина була створена система персональних ідентифікаційних номерів Pavlokomata (PPIN), що складалася з унікального рядка змінних із американським кодом Soundex особи, ініціалом її імені, її стать та останні три цифри року народження. PPIN дозволяє пов'язувати дані з різних електронних таблиць, здійснювати пошук і об'єднувати, забезпечуючи таким чином сувору документацію для певної особи. Ми віримо, що PPIN надасть історичним демографам та іншим дослідникам інструмент для поглиблених позовжних і поперечних досліджень окремих осіб, сімей і різних когорт населення. Вважаємо також, що історико-демографічні дані в цьому дослідженні служуватимуть зразком для дослідження інших галицьких українських сіл; і що демографи зможуть використовувати результати, щоб зробити глибокі та обґрунтовані висновки щодо демографічних тем, які їх цікавлять.

Ми не намагалися проводити обширний аналіз народжуваності чи смертності. Проте ми представляємо огляд цих та інших демографічних тем і робимо відповідні спостереження. Сподіваємось, майбутні дослідники отримають користь від інформації, представленої в цьому дослідженні.

CHAPTER 1: PAVLOKOMA, A UKRAINIAN VILLAGE

Figure 1-1. Pavlokoma is 5.8 km. east of Dynów and 50.6 km. west of Przemyśl

1-1.

The focus of this book is the centuries-old village of Pavlokoma¹ near the San (Ukrainian: Sian) River in the historic region of Galicia. It ceased to exist as an ethnic Ukrainian settlement in March 1945, when 366 of its Ukrainian inhabitants were massacred by soldiers of the Polish Armija Krajowa (Home Army) and those who survived were forcibly removed and resettled in Soviet Ukraine or in the former German lands of postwar northern and western Poland. Today the village's completely ethnic Polish successor, Pawłokoma, is in the Polish administrative district of ¹ Pavlokoma is the transliterated form of the village's Ukrainian name, Павлокома. It is used throughout this book when referring to the village until 1945, except when the village's Polish name, Pawłokoma, is appropriate.

Dynów Gmina (Commune) in Brzozów County, Podkarpackie [Subcarpathian] Voivodeship.

The village's name changed over time. It was first mentioned as Powlokow in a document dated 1441, and then as de Powlokowa in a 1448 document, Pawlikowa in 1452, and Powlokowa² in 1470. Since 1772 the village's Polish name has been Pawłokoma.

1-2. Earliest Information

The earliest evidence of human presence in the middle San Basin dates from the Mesolithic and early Neolithic periods.³ Descriptive accounts of various cultural groups and their known or hypothetical arrival in the vicinity of what became Pavlokoma has been the subject of detailed studies by historians and archeologists. No definite conclusions have been reached, however, and the reasons why prehistoric groups settled there are not clearly understood, primarily because there are no conclusive archeological or cultural data.

Located on a hill in a southerly direction in that part of Pavlokoma formerly known as Horodys'ka are remnants of a fortified settlement's defensive ramparts. Unearthed there were fifty pieces of pottery that archeologists have assigned to the Lusatian culture (1300–500 BC). These defenses were probably built to protect the local population and the water and land routes along the San River. There were fourteen such settlements, from Yaroslav (now the city of Jarosław in Poland) southward along the San. They were either a defensive line of the Rus' principality of Peremyshl (now the Polish city of Przemyśl) or delineated the border between Wolski (p. 36) writes that there is evidence of human activity in the territory in the Stone Age p. 36) and mentions the castle in Pavlokoma (p. 38). Żaki claims that the presence of humans in the middle San Basin probably dates to the Mesolithic or early Neolithic periods; see his «Z archeologii województwa rzeszowskiego,» Rocznik Przemyski 9, no. 2 (1962): 193–229. it and the Duchy of Cracow.⁴ West of this border there were eighty to a hundred kilometres of dense forest, through which the rivers San and Wisła served as travel and communication routes.⁵

Concrete information about the fortifications in Pavlokoma does not exist. But there are several scholarly conjectures about their erection and use. Michał Parczewski sees them as part of the establishment of a border between Poland and Kyivan Rus'.⁶ Jacek Poleski believes the fortifications were built in the eighth or ninth century and that they are the eighth-oldest of eighty-eight such constructions, older even than the castles in Peremyshl and Cracow.⁷ Although he believes it is not possible to answer why such castles were built, he has speculated that they were erected as defensive structures against Avar incursions or reflected the growing social and political dynamics of the tribes that lived in the region.⁸ Archeologists do not agree about how long such tribal fortifications may have functioned as defensive structures. Some have claimed they functioned no longer than the end of the tenth century; others speculate that they did so until the twelfth century.⁹

Poleski assumes that these fortifications most likely served as local administrative and military centres, but also as productive centres of specialized artisanry and trade and eventually as

Parczewski thinks that the valley of the middle San was a very important communication route between the smaller tribal groups that formed in the areas between present-day Jasło and Sanok and between Rzeszów and Przemyśl. The first area was intersected by the Polish-Ruś border, but the second area was then fully within Peremyshl Principality.

defensive structures.¹⁰ For us, however, the most notable fact is their very existence on the territory of Pavlokoma already in the eighth century. It is therefore difficult to accept the proposition by some historical amateurs that Mikolaj Kmita, the Polish castellan (1433–47) of Przemyśl, established Pavlokoma in the fifteenth century «na surowym korzeniu» (i.e., in an uninhabited place). In the minds of local inhabitants, the fortifications were wrapped in all kinds of myths, which were retold to children in various stories. What is significant is that no other buildings have ever been erected on their site. Perhaps the fortified settlement founded there also had a religious significance. Both Kyivan Rus' and Poland were Christianized during the second half of the tenth century. It is likely, therefore, that a church was built in Pavlokoma. At that time this entire territory practiced the Old Church Slavonic rite (founded by Bishops Cyril and Methodius), which, after St. Methodius's death in 885, was suppressed and liquidated by Wiching, the Swabian bishop of Nitra (880–91).¹¹ It seems that Pavlokoma and elsewhere in the territory between the San and Wisła rivers that belonged to the Rus' Principality of Halych were not subjected to Latinization pressures. A sixteenth-century document clearly shows that Pavlokoma's church was Orthodox Christian and celebrated the liturgy in Old Church Slavonic.

1-3. The Paleolithic Period

The oldest human settlements in the vicinity of Pavlokoma and the nearby town of Dynów arose during the Paleolithic period some 29,000 to 36,000 years ago. They were located in the valley of the Baryczka River, a small tributary of the San. During the Bronze Age, the population was clearly Indo-European,¹² and in the early Iron Age Thracian, Illyrian, and Celtic tribes were known in Europe.¹³ Some scholars believe the name of the San River is Thracian in origin.¹⁴ The area where Dynów and the nearby village of Bachórz are located was populated in the late Bronze Age and early Iron Age (1300–500 BC) by people of the Tarnobrzeg Lusatian culture—precursors of the early Slavs.¹⁵ The Lusatian culture was destroyed by the Iranian Scythians in the 5th century BC.¹⁶

Artifacts of the so-called Przeworsk culture discovered on this territory date from approximately the end of the 4th century AD and even earlier. Polish archeologists excavated them in the villages of Dynów, Bachórz, Harta, and Pavlokoma.¹⁷ Many scholars associate the Przeworsk culture with the Slavs. During the migration of the Slavs, the San lands were controlled by the Sarmato-Alanic Antes, who were of Iranic origin. The Slavs gained control of the population of the Przeworsk culture.¹⁸ Eugeniusz Kucharski wrote about the Alans' presence in the region,¹⁹ where the century-old rule of the Antes came to an end with the arrival of the Huns under Attila in the mid-fifth century AD.

With the help of the Alanic Croats, who were then allies of the Huns, the Alans gained control of the territory. Historians still debate which area was controlled by the Croat tribes. The Alanic tribes had a huge influence on the region's culture and language. The so-called blue ceramics of the third and fourth centuries AD excavated at Dynów, Bachórz, and Harta clearly show Alanic Antes were present in the Pavlokoma area. Some scholars have claimed that the names of the Danube and the Dunajec River in Poland and Slovakia derive from «danav,» the Alanic word for water. As late as the fifteenth century the area was known as Denov.²⁰ The White Croats ruled there for about a hundred years until the eighth century.²¹ Jerzy Gaczyński claims that once Grand Prince Oleh of Kyiv defeated the Derevlianians ca. 883, he began collecting tribute from the inhabitants of the lands between the Horyn and Vepr (Polish: Wieprz) Rivers and in the upper reaches of the Dniester and San Rivers.²² Gaczyński states that toward the end of the ninth century this territory was controlled by the Lechitic Lendians, who were allied with Great Moravia.²³

In the tenth century these lands were attacked by the Pechenegs, but they also established closer ties with Kyiv's princes. The Rus' Primary Chronicle mentions that White Croat warriors took part in the sea raids against Constantinople by Princes Oleh (907) and Ihor (944).²⁴ Fleeing westward from the Pechenegs' incursions, members of various Rus' tribes, especially of the Ulychians, migrated into these lands in large numbers. This is reflected in the name of Uliuch, a village southeast of Dynów and south of Pavlokoma. Its original name (earliest date 1373) was Ulich, and it was founded based on Rus' Law.²⁵ After Ihor's death in 944, his son and successor Sviatoslav and subsequent grand princes of Kyiv shifted their attention to the Balkans. Consequently, Czech and Polish influence increased in these lands, and around 955 they were annexed by Great Moravia and Poland. In 981 Kyiv's Grand Prince Volodymyr the Great took the Cherven towns and Peremyshl from the Poles. He also wanted to take hold of Cracow, but the Poles foiled him with help from the Pechenegs. Control of these lands changed hands repeatedly until 1092, when Peremyshl was awarded to a grandson of Grand Prince Yaroslav the Wise, Prince Volodar Rostyslavych, who died in a battle against the Polovtsians in 1124 alongside his brother Vasyl'ko. In the twelfth century, the lands of the San Basin, including Pavlokoma, belonged to the Rus' principalities of Peremyshl and, from 1141, Halych.²⁶

The Hypatian Chronicle mentions that in 1150 Hungary's King Geza II captured Sanok and many villages around Peremyshl, and in 1240 these lands were ransacked by the Tatars,²⁷ helped in both cases by the fact that the San Basin was well populated and had good lines of communication.²⁸

Poland's King Casimir III began advancing against the Rus' Kingdom of Galicia-Volynia in 1340, and by 1349 he had incorporated it into his realm. From then on Galicia was ruled by Poland until 1772, thereafter by the Austrian (from 1867 the Austro-Hungarian) Monarchy until 1918, and then, until 1939, by the Polish Republic. During all these centuries, until 1945, eastern Galicia's ethnographic borders were quite stable, even though ethnic Polish in-migration and Polonization of the indigenous ethnic Ukrainian population, except the Lemkos, were quite intense in the seventeenth to nineteenth centuries. Consequently, the ethnic Ukrainian inhabitants and their settlements were pushed some twenty to forty kilometres eastward from where they had been in the fourteenth century. The events of the Second World War,²⁹ the bitter wartime Polish-Ukrainian conflict, and finally the forced resettlement of the Ukrainians in these territories including in Pavlokoma, to elsewhere in Poland or to Soviet Ukraine also completely changed the region's ethnic balance.

²⁹ During the Second World War, Pavlokoma's residents experienced various trials and tribulations. In 1939, twenty-four of them were conscripted by the Polish Army to fight the invading German military; sixteen were arrested by the NKVD during the years 1939–41; nine were conscripted by the Red Army in 1940; 193 were taken to the Third Reich as forced labourers during the years 1941–43; nine were arrested by the Germans in 1941 or 1942; seven enlisted in the Galizien (Galicia) Fourteenth Volunteer Division of the SS to fight the Red Army in 1943; 5 were forced to join the Red Army in 1944; 366 were murdered in Pavlokoma by the Polish Home Army on 3 March 1945; and forty-two joined the Ukrainian Insurgent Army (UPA) in 1945. Petro I. Potichnyi [Peter J. Potichnyi] lists their names in his book Pavlokoma, 1441–1945: Istoriia sela (Toronto and Lviv: Pavlokoma Foundation, 2001), 282–301, 430–40, and 443–52, <https://diasporiana.org.ua/ukrainica/12916-potichniy-p-pavlokoma-1441-1945-istoriya-sela/>.

Section 1-4. The Documents about Pavlokoma and Its Owners

The oldest extant document that mentions Pavlokoma is dated 13 October 1441 and refers to the village as having been granted to Mikolaj Kmita, the castellan of Przemyśl. Later the village belonged to Kmita's sons Jan, the castellan of Przemyśl and Lviv, and Dobiesław.³⁰ The Kmita family had extensive land holdings in the San region from 1340, the year that Galicia became part of the Polish Kingdom.³¹

Several other villages are also mentioned in the early documents, including nearby Bartkówka, Sielnica, and Dynów.³² Neighbouring villages was also noted during this period—for example, Dilagova Volia (now Dylągowa), whose name shows that it may not have been a Polish village.³³ A 1580 source mentions there were manors in most of the villages in this area and in «Powlokomia cum praedio.»³⁴ Interestingly, after these villages were founded, their reeves and magistrates had German names—for example, «Henricus in Pawlokoma.» Adam Fastnacht stresses, however, that the population was entirely Ruthenian or Polish, except in Harta and Dynów.³⁵

Jan from Żmigród Stadnicki, who inherited the villages of Pavlokoma, Bachórz, and Bartkówka from Kmita, sold Pavlokoma's «parsonage» in 1595 to the village's Orthodox priest,

The first four owners of Bachórz were Piotr Kmita, the castellan of Lublin; his son Piotr Łunak Kmita; Łunak's son Jan from Sobień and Bachórz; and Mikolaj Kmita from Sobień, the castellan of Przemyśl. See «Sianots'kyi zems'kyi sud,» fol. 1, spr. 1, p. 283.

³² Fastnacht, Osadnictwo, 77–78. In 1340 Małgorzata Mościć (Margaretha de Denow) became the owner of Dynów. Ownership of Pavlokoma (known then as Powłokow or Powłokomia) and the village of Slonne (later part of Polchowa) was disputed in the court case between Mościć and her uncle Mikolaj Kmita. The first document, dated 1604, mentions the church in Pavlokoma.³⁷ Two documents dated 1773 provide information about serfdom in the village, its inhabitants, the landowners' names, and their wealth.³⁸ At that time Pavlokoma's owner was Józef Boznański, who bought it in 1766, probably from the prince and bishop Ignacy Krasicki.³⁹

An 1810 inventory indicates that Ignacy Skrzyński inherited the village,⁴⁰ and after him, Aleksander Skrzyński (1882–1931), a lawyer, Austro-Hungarian diplomat (1908–14), and later Poland's ambassador to Romania (1919), foreign minister (1922–23, 1924–26), and prime minister (1925–26). Concerned perhaps that the Polish-Ukrainian border would shift and cause him to lose his ancestral holdings, he divested himself of his Pavlokoma estate in 1918 and sold his lands there to Poles from neighbouring villages instead of the indigenous Ukrainians. The newcomers formed a separate colony in the village and were referred to as «colonists» by their Ukrainian neighbours. Many scholars believe that Skrzyński's actions as prime minister laid the foundation for the widespread Polish-Ukrainian tensions that persisted in interwar Poland.

The 1787–89 Josephinian and 1820–41 Franciscan cadastres confirm that Pavlokoma's denizens were mostly «Ruthenian» and of the Greek Catholic rite.⁴¹ This fact is supported by a 1798 document confirming Jan Stadnicki's earlier sale of the parish, which was authenticated by the signatures of the parish priest Petro Mykhal's'kyi, the reeve Jacek Kosztowski, and Mykhailo Karpa.⁴²

The remaining documents are from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Many are of church provenance and were deposited in the archive of the Peremyshl (Przemyśl) Greek Catholic Eparchy. The final document is a list of the 366 inhabitants of Pavlokoma who were murdered by the Polish Home Army unit commanded by Józef Bis (nom de guerre Waclaw) on 2 and 3 March 1945.

All the above documents have provided the fundamental information for this study.

1-5. The Role of the Church

The copy of the original document of 1595 mentioned above shows that at that time Pavlokoma already had a church and that its inhabitants were Ruthenians (the Ukrainians' previous name). The dedication of the church to St. Mary the Protectress indicates that it was one of the oldest Orthodox churches in the region.⁴³

It is not known when that church Pavlokoma was founded. This may have happened in the tenth century or, at the latest, the thirteenth century. The Polish historian Józef Widajewicz has shown that the founding of churches in the Rus' Principality of Halych can be divided into an «older» and a «newer» group, depending on to what saint they were dedicated. All the «older» churches were dedicated to Saint Mary, while the «newer» ones were dedicated to other saints. As we know the church in Pavlokoma was dedicated to Saint Mary.⁴⁴ The «older» churches may have been rebuilt times over the centuries, but their dedication to St. Mary remained unchanged. Pavlokoma's Polish inhabitants travelled seven kilometres to attend mass at the Roman Catholic church in Dylałowa, while the village's few Jewish residents attended the synagogue in Dynów six kilometres away.

A second document, which dates from the 1610s, states that Katarzyna Maciejowska funded the completion of a Polish Catholic church in Dynów in 1604 and bought the Orthodox churches in Izdebki, Łubno, Chyżne, Nozdrzec, and Bachórzec from the Ruthenian «schismatics» and the Ruthenian Uniate church in «Pawłokowa»,⁴⁵ probably intending to convert it into a Polish Catholic church. It appears that her plan did not materialize, for that church remained Uniate until its demolition by the Poles in 1965.

There were 550 Uniate Ruthenians in Pavlokoma in 1859. Their number rose to 762 in 1879, 930 in 1899, 989 in 1926, and 1,175 in 1936. In 1936, 261 Roman Catholics and 7 Jews lived in the vicinity.⁴⁶ Table 1-1 summarizes the demographic, ethnic, and religious situation in Pavlokoma until 1945.

The church union concluded between the Ruthenian Orthodox hierarchs and the Vatican was accepted quite late in Peremyshl Eparchy—in 1681, eighty-five years after it had been officially signed in 1595. But we know that support for the church union had begun growing rapidly after 1610, and the church in Pavlokoma had adopted it at the beginning of the seventeenth century.

In the mid-seventeenth century, Przemyśl Diocese had three thousand Roman Catholic Churches. Peremyshl-Sambir-Sianik Eparchy had six hundred Uniate or Orthodox churches, most of them in the Sambir region, where the Uniate bishop resided at the Transfiguration Monastery in the village of Spas or St. Onuphrius's Monastery in the village of Lavriv.⁴⁷ In that eparchy Pavlokoma's parish was Uniate.

Pavlokoma's parish was relatively small (533 hectares). In 1785 there were 440 Uniates, Catholics, 81 Roman Catholics, and 8 Jewish persons in the village. In 1804 only sixty-eight of the peasants in the village were required to pay tribute to the Uniate parish priest.⁴⁸ The twelve Roman Catholic peasants who settled in the village at that time did not have to pay tribute to the priest, and he loudly protested.⁴⁹ In 1900 Pavlokoma had 996 inhabitants, 510 of them male and 486 female. The report of the local Prosvita enlightenment society stated that in 1929–30 the community numbered 1,309 persons, of whom 1,069 were Ukrainian,⁵⁰ and that in 1932 Pavlokoma had a population of 1,270, a thousand of whom were Ukrainian.⁵¹ A similar report indicates that in January 1935 the village had 208 households, of which 170 belonged to Ukrainians, thirty-six to Poles, and two to Jews.⁵² In 1936 there were 232 households; 170 were owned by Ukrainians, sixty, by Poles; and two, by Jews.⁵³ The population density per hectare is estimated to have been 1.00 villagers in 1785, 1.87 in 1900, and 2.46 in 1929.

The number of Polish households in Pavlokoma increased as a result of the influx of Polish colonists and had a very negative effect on ethnic relations in the village. Volodymyr Kubiiiovych, who consulted the 1932, 1936, and 1938 clerical shematyzmy (registers) of the Greek Catholic Church in the Ukrainian territories of interwar Poland as well as the official Polish census results, almost fully supported the statistics published in the shematyzmy. According to him, on 1 January 1939 Pavlokoma had 1,370 inhabitants, of whom 1,190 were Ukrainians (1,030 Greek Catholics and 160 Roman Catholics), 170 Poles (100 of them colonists), and ten Jews.⁵⁴ Thirty-nine years earlier, the 1900 Austro-Hungarian census results indicated that 829 persons in that village were Ukrainian speakers, 168 were Polish, and no one spoke German.⁵⁵

There is no doubt that the existence of a separate liturgical language as well as a separate administrative jurisdiction and hierarchy of the Greek Catholic Church prevented the quick Polonization of the Ukrainian villagers. But this did not mean that national identity grew rapidly among the Ukrainians. Only the creation of village schools and the arrival of nationally conscious teachers and the priests awakened the villagers' national identity. Although the interwar Polish state and officials suppressed Ukrainian patriotic activity, the villagers actively supported the Galician Ukrainian religious and cultural institutions that had some autonomy and limited freedom. The mass murder of Pavlokoma's Ukrainians by the Polish Home Army in 1945 and the forced resettlement of those few who survived in the USSR and elsewhere in Poland during the Wisła Operation in 1947 brought about the permanent and tragic end of Pavlokoma as a Ukrainian village. Its Greek Catholic church, which was architecturally different from Polish churches, was razed to the ground in 1965⁶⁵ with the blessing of the Polish Roman Catholic clergy in Dylągowa (Rev. Paweł Marcin) and other neighbouring villages. Now only the bell tower remained as a reminder of the village's Ukrainian past until a memorial to the victims of the 1945 massacre was unveiled in 2006.⁶⁶

To round out the story of the Pavlokoma church it is important to provide the names of the priests who served this community from 1750. This information comes from various sources and is summarized in table 1-2.⁶⁷

Section 1-6. Schools

It is not known if any schooling of children took place in Pavlokoma before 1777, the year that the Austrian Empire introduced a sweeping educational reform and founded a variety of schools in the realm. It is possible that parish priests provided limited reading classes to select children, but it was only in 1848 that the first school councils were established and schools were founded under the auspices of the church consistories. Only two authorized village representatives in Pavlokoma, Mykhailo Potichnyi and Hryhorii Mudryk, officially undertook an obligation to build and maintain a school in 1866.⁶⁸ That school was Ukrainian in the beginning, but over time many changes were introduced.⁶⁹ Consequently, use of the Ukrainian language was limited and Ukrainian teachers were replaced by Poles. The Ukrainian school in Pavlokoma lasted until 1931, when it was made bilingual, but with Polish as the principal language based on the Sejm's act popularly colloquially known as Lex Grabski.⁷⁰ Simultaneously a Polish school was established and lasted until 1939.⁷¹ Hence there were two schools in Pavlokoma, the bilingual one for the Ukrainian pupils with special emphasis on all things Polish, and the Polish one. The Polish school was run by Maria Kośmider, and the headmaster of the Ukrainian school until his retirement soon after 1918 was Mykola Levyts'kyi. After Levyts'kyi all Pavlokoma's school principals were Poles. Mr. Levyts'kyi held strong Ukrainian patriotic views, and under his tutelage new generations of Pavlokoma's children were imbued with them. Because of his views, he was assassinated during the Nazi occupation by the Polish underground in 1943. His wife, Stefania, was one of the 366 residents of Pavlokoma murdered by Polish Home Army soldiers in March 1945.

⁶⁹ The number of Ukrainian schools in Poland declined from 2,426 in 1921–22 to 745 in 1927–28. In 1937–38 only 352 remained.

During the 1939–41 Soviet occupation of Western Ukraine, Pavlokoma's bilingual school was Ukrainianized and it remained so during the subsequent German occupation, but only until 1943. In 1944 and until March 1945 that Ukrainian school did not function owing to attacks and intimidation by the Polish underground. Attendance in both village schools varied according to the pupils' ethnic and religious alignment and beliefs.⁷² Unfortunately precise information about school enrollment for the entire interwar period (1918–39) is lacking. After the war and the liquidation of Pavlokoma's Ukrainians, the Polish school took over the former Ukrainian school. Eventually a new school and Catholic church were built for the village's new Polish residents.

Section 1-7. Community Life

Prosvita, the Ukrainian society for the promotion of education and culture among adults established in Lviv in 1868, was another institution that had an important influence on raising the educational level of Galicia's Ukrainian population. Yosyf Potichnyi, Mykola Levyts'kyi, and others were instrumental in the founding of the Prosvita branch and reading room in Pavlokoma, which maintained an extremely well organized and balanced multilingual library. The branch also had a decent choir and amateur theatre troupe, which periodically put on concerts and plays, and song-and-dance evenings that were held in the Prosvita building. Village meetings were also held there, and the building accommodated a small but well-stocked village store and a milk-and-egg collecting station for the Maslosoiuz association of Ukrainian dairy co-operatives.⁷³ The land on which the Prosvita reading room and community building were located was purchased from Stefan Petrovych in 1906.

As late as 1945 Pavlokoma remained a quaint peasant village in the Carpathian foothills lacking any modern conveniences, such as electricity, telephones, a telegraph,⁷⁴ paved roads, bridges, railway connections, indoor plumbing, or even a post office. Austrian documents and very spotty Polish information describe what existed in Pavlokoma during this period. The villagers had to travel to the nearby town of Dynów to avail themselves of the services listed above—a trip that required taking the ferry in Bartkówka to cross the San River. The peasant farmers produced most of their own food, clothing, and the goods they needed to survive. Like most villagers in the region, they led subsistence-level lives and had only a few acres to provide for their families. The cadastral maps, directories, and gazetteers identify the local land and business owners. The 1900 Austro-Hungarian census provides similar information regarding Pavlokoma, such as the population by gender, religious affiliation, the language(s) spoken, the number of houses and schoolchildren, and the size of the village in hectares.⁷⁵

⁷² There were problems, however, because the Roman Catholic ethnic Ukrainians did not want to send their children to the Polish school.

Volume 12 (1907) of Gemeindelexikon der im Reichsrate vertretenen Königreiche und Länder, p. 12, identifies where the schools, churches, and synagogue of Pavlokoma's residents were located. The Greek Catholic Ruthenian villagers attended St. Mary's Church in Pavlokoma; the Roman Catholic Polish villagers attended St. Michaels Church in the village of Dylągowa; and the few Jewish villagers attended the synagogue in Dynów.⁷⁶ The Greek Catholic villagers of Sil'nytsia (Polish: Sielnica, five km away) also attended St. Mary's Church in Pavlokoma. Inevitably, local Poles and Ruthenians intermarried over the centuries. Their children's religious affiliation was determined by their parents' own preferences. Fathers generally had their sons baptized in their own faith, and mothers tended to do the same with their daughters. Men and women in mixed marriages did not always adopt their spouses' religion, but they usually followed the accepted practice concerning their offspring. It should be understood, however, that baptism in a faith did not necessarily extend to the raising of children. The choices made were of little consequence until political and nationalistic factors became prevalent in the early to mid-twentieth century.

⁷⁵ According to the 1900 Austro-Hungarian census, Pavlokoma had an area of 535 hectares; 996 residents, 510 of them males and 486 females; 172 Roman Catholics, 821 Greek Catholics, and 3 Jews; 168 Polish speakers and 829 Ukrainian speakers; and 149 houses.¹⁴⁹

Political, ecclesiastic, and economic events may have affected Pavlokoma's villagers' daily lives. Chronological reviews of events over the centuries have given demographers an indication of what records are available. For example, in 1563 the Council of Trent required all parishes to keep birth and marriage records henceforth;⁷⁷ in 1781 Austria introduced laws that obligated Catholic priests to act as civil registrars; and in 1784 Catholic parish records were officially designated the state registers of births, marriages, and deaths.⁷⁸

During the latter part of the nineteenth century and the beginning of the twentieth century, a major emigration of villagers from Pavlokoma occurred. Demographers typically ascribe the factors causing the movement in terms of push or pull, where push can include political or economic tensions between ethnic groups, such as Poles and Ukrainians. The lack of ability to provide adequate food and shelter may have been another factor. Pull factors likely included opportunities for steady employment abroad and, greater economic prosperity. Industrial expansion in the United States, for example, provided opportunities for individuals capable of working in the mills and mines, building railroads, and in related industries. The promise of riches attracted immigrants from eastern and southern Europe during the years 1870–1914. Pavlokoma's villagers were no exception, and at least six hundred of them made their way to the German ports of Hamburg and Bremen to board steamships going to America as steerage (third-class) passengers. Many eventually became naturalized U.S. citizens.

1-8. Villagers' Surnames

Eighteenth- and nineteenth-century cadastral and imperial metrical records are often overlooked additional sources of demographic information. Cadastral maps and their corresponding books of fields and their owners are available for many Galician villages. Cadastral data about Pavlokoma and a reproduction of its cadastral map in the 1850s are in Peter J. Potichnyj's history of Pavlokoma.⁷⁹ The 1787–88 Josephinian Metric and 1820–47 Franciscan Metric contain lists of village inhabitants and their house numbers.⁸⁰

The 1787 Austrian cadastral records contain a list of residents' surnames in various villages, including a few in Pavlokoma.⁸¹ In his book about Lemko surnames in the eighteenth century, Krasovs'kyi lists 353 residents of Pavlokoma found in the 1787–88 cadastre.⁸² It is of value for demographic studies of the distribution and migration of persons with the same surname.

1-9. Pawłokoma Today

In this chapter we have presented the historical setting in which Pavlokoma's inhabitants found themselves, the various challenges they faced, and how they dealt with them through the centuries. The twentieth century was most unkind to them. The thriving village was physically destroyed, and most of its Ukrainian inhabitants were either killed or forcibly dispersed, most of them to foreign lands. The most tragic element in their story is that major perpetrators of the crime were Polish neighbours, who had harmoniously lived with the Ukrainians for many years. After World War II Pavlokoma was rebuilt and became a village entirely populated by ethnic Poles. Only three sites in the village show that things were different in the past: the bell tower of the demolished Greek Catholic church; the old school building; and the three mass graves. A memorial in the old cemetery to the 3 March 1945 massacre was unveiled on 13 May 2006 by Presidents Viktor Yushchenko of Ukraine and Lech Kaczyński of Poland. The memorial has become an annual pilgrimage place for Ukrainians from around the world.

The Inventarium is interesting because villagers' names are mentioned in connection with their wealth. It names four categories of peasants and their serf-labour obligations: kmet (richer peasant), zahorodnyk (hovel owner with a garden), khalupnyk (hovel owner), and bezkhats'kyi (homeless). It also lists ferrymen (on the San River), foresters, the reeve (viit), and two shepherds as free from these obligations.

We hope that the information we have compiled and present in this book using the magic of demographic analysis will help to reunite Pavlokoma's scattered Ukrainians and their descendants and provide a model for Ukrainians and other Eastern Europeans to recover at least a portion of their lost or forgotten past.

CHAPTER 2: HISTORICAL DEMOGRAPHY

We outlined in Chapter 1 the historical context of Pavlokoma. In Chapter 2 and thereafter we will concentrate on providing a quantitative study of the size and structure of Pavlokoma's past populations. In this chapter we also introduce the various data sources required to undertake such a historical-demography study. French historians Lewis Henry and Michel Fleury⁸³ introduced the research field of historical demography. One of Henry's innovative approaches was based on collecting metrical data in parish records in order to study reproductive behaviour and population change. In our study of Pavlokoma we used the same, basic demographic data types and methodologies as Henry's to investigate changes in topics such as population, fertility, nuptiality, mortality, and migration. We also introduce data sets (spreadsheets) for the village of Pavlokoma. Our research is similar to Henry's in our application of metrical records to identify individuals and their relationships. Henry used metrical data collected from hundreds of Roman Catholic villages, whereas we focus solely on the village of Pavlokoma. The relative size of Henry's data set is exponentially larger than ours, and his analysis focused on the reconstitution of the family.⁸⁴ We also deal with family reconstitution as well as the identification of persons born in Pavlokoma.

In the early days of historical demography, quality data sets were developed slowly and tediously owing to the lack of adequate computing capability. Despite the limitations that early historical demographers faced, significant advances in data collection, methodology, and analyses were made during the decades that followed.

So did refinements in terminology and demographic vocabulary. Zhongwei Zhao differentiates historical demography from demographic or population history: «in general, historical ⁸³ Gay L. Gullickson, Spinners and Weavers of Auffay: Rural Industry and the Sexual Division of Labor in a French Village, 1750–1850 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1986), 5. Henry and Fleury are generally credited with the development of modern historical demography Henry's landmark studies in the 1950s focused on population trends of French peasant villages.

demography tends to be more involved in tackling the technical problems of measuring past demographic changes in developing effective methods of analyzing historical population data, whereas demographic history is more concerned with the reason, processes and consequences of major demographic events, especially their long-term impact on socio-economic changes in historical development.»⁸⁵ The distinctions that Zhao provides apply to our study of individual and family relationships and understanding why historical events affected persons' lives.

2-2. Primary Data Sources in Historical Demography Research

Ecclesiastical parish records (of birth, marriage, and death) and migration sources provide the foundation for historic demography research of past populations. Many parish records have been deposited in state and national archives, where several archival records (fonds) are microfilmed and made available to researchers. Several collections of parish records about the Greek Catholic villagers born in Pavlokoma are available, but, unfortunately, most Roman Catholic records are not included in this book. The church that the village's Roman Catholics attended was in Dylągowa four kilometres south of Pavlokoma. That parish's records have remained there or been transferred to the diocesan or other archives; in all cases they have been mostly inaccessible. Among the Greek Catholic Eparchy's documents held by the state archive in Przemyśl are many ecclesiastical records of Pavlokoma's defunct Greek Catholic parish. Some are available online, while the others are available only at the archive.

During the late 1830s and the 1840s, printed columnar forms were sent to the various parishes in the diocese, including to Pavlokoma's. Rev. Mykola Zakhariasevych began the task of transferring Pavlokoma's and Sielnica's metrical records from the Greek Catholic parish book to those forms,⁸⁶ which ultimately became the backup copy often referred to as the «Bishop's Copy.»

A limiting factor, which Henry and others have recognized, is that parish records only contain information about one religion

⁸⁵ Zhongwei Zhao, «Historical Demography,» in Encyclopedia of Life Support Systems, vol. 1, ed. Yi Zeng (Paris: Eolss, 2010), 41.

or rite. The data we gathered reflects Pavlokoma's Ruthenian/Ukrainian Greek Catholic population, with minimal records about the Roman Catholic and Jewish villagers. The Roman Catholic priests in Dylągowa have controlled most of their parish's earlier records and did not grant access to them except for an individual's request for a baptismal or marriage certificate. Metrical record collection from nearby villages, such as Bartkówka, Bachórz, Sielnica, Dylągowa (where the birth records for Pavlokoma's Roman Catholic villagers were kept), and Dynów (where there was a Jewish shtetl) were outside the scope of our research.

We accessed the fonds containing Pavlokoma's parish records in the state and regional archives of Przemyśl and Lviv.⁸⁷ Many of the records preserved in the State Archive in Przemyśl date back to 1784 and are available online.⁸⁸ Researchers believe that the collecting of parish records in Europe began around 1500.⁸⁹ Our best estimate is based on the year 1563, when the Council of Trent issued the requirement that Catholic churches keep records of births, baptisms, and marriages. The originally Orthodox church in Pavlokoma became Greek Catholic in the seventeenth century.⁹⁰

We found information for more than 3,500 surnames of Pavlokoma's villagers in various sources, the majority in the Liber natorum of births and baptisms during the years 1787–1845 and 1886–1945. The archival records we found in Przemyśl and Lviv provide information about the villagers' birthdates, their names at birth, their sex, and the number of the house where they were born; their parents' given names and surnames, including the ⁸⁷ Investigating Eastern European communities requires scholars to deal with records written in several languages, including English, German, Latin, Polish, Hungarian, Old Church Slavonic, and Ukrainian.

⁹⁰ When the first church in Pavlokoma was built is not known. A castle existed there earlier than the ones in Przemyśl and Cracow, and therefore a church or some house of worship probably also existed there earlier, and parish records were kept. But they are not extant. It is also likely that the church's construction was funded by the castle owner. But no documents about that church have been found. In later centuries, feudal lords funded and maintained churches irrespective of their religion.

mothers' maiden names; the godparents' names, including the godmothers' married names; and the first and last names of midwives and parish priests. In the event that a child died, their date of death is also provided.⁹¹

The second category of demographic records were found in the Liber copulatorum of matrimony during the years 1784–1898⁹²—the newlyweds' marriage date, their first and last names, and the number of the husband's house; the place of birth of the husbands or wives not born in Pavlokoma; the four witnesses' names (two males and two females); the names of the married female witnesses' husbands; and the names of the priests who performed the marriage ceremony.⁹³

The third category of records were found in the Liber mortuorum during the years 1784–1843—the death date and sometimes the date of burial; the house number, first and last name, and sex of the deceased; and a child's date of death in days or months since birth. Often only estimates of the birthdate and the illness or the cause of death (in Latin) were provided.

In addition to the above data, other metrical information was obtained from online sources or through correspondence with members of the Pavlokoma diaspora or their family members. All the above information appears in the Pavlokoma spreadsheets.

Data about the fourth demographic category—migration—are located mostly in the ship-manifest records of the first wave⁹⁴ of immigrants to Canada and the United States. They contain the immigrant's name, date of arrival, port of entry, marital status, occupation, gender, age upon arrival, place of birth, and destination; the name and address of the person they are coming to see and of their traveling companions; and the name of a contact back home. Sources for these migration records can be found at genealogy sites such as the Ellis Island collection and in the national archives of the countries where the Pavlokoma diaspora settled, including Canada, the United States, Australia, Brazil, Argentina, and of Western Europe. Emigration records are available in Hamburg and Bremen, Germany. Most of the information found in the ship manifests appears in the Pavlokoma immigration spreadsheet.

⁹¹ Until 1918 the preprinted forms sent to parishes were in Latin, and the information in them was entered mostly in Latin. From 1918 on the forms were bilingual, in Latin and Ukrainian, and the information in them was often entered in Ukrainian.

2-3. Additional Data Sources

The demographic materials used to write this book are scattered throughout the archives of Poland, Ukraine, Austria, Hungary, Germany, and countries where members of the Pavlokoma diaspora have resided. Frequent changes in political alliances, border changes, and the turbulent history of the territory where Pavlokoma has been located account for the diversity of archival sources. The sources of demographic data for the Pavlokoma diaspora include immigration records, newspaper archives, obituaries, naturalization papers, church records, civil records, passport applications, military draft records (of both World Wars I and II). Many were found online on the websites of the Library and Archives Canada and the U.S. National Archives and Records Administration, or on websites where membership fees are charged to access records. Some records have been digitized and are available on the Internet; others must be recovered onsite by the researcher or by hired archival professionals. To fill gaps in the Pavlokoma record set, we searched multiple sources.⁹⁵

Several genealogy sites and blogs were examined, because family genealogies can provide valuable demographic information if there is a clear understanding that they were constructed for purposes other than demographic research. Demographers recognize that genealogical data are not the same as parish registers or civil registration records, the difference being that the compilation of information often occurs decades or hundreds of years after events occur. Often genealogical records have biases built into them. While frequently invaluable, family genealogies must be scrutinized for accuracy, omissions, and validity.

Civil records, including Canadian and U.S. census and draft-enrolment and naturalization records, provided a wealth of information that complemented the metrical fonds. Finally, population registers and census materials developed by the Austro-Hungarian government to determine taxation profiles or identify individuals for military service, including enlistment and casualty records during World War I, ⁹⁶ were searched in the fonds located in Austro-Hungarian state archives.

⁹⁵ Valuable information was also gathered through correspondence with several former Pavlokoma inhabitants residing in various countries.

⁹⁶ The ten individuals from Pavlokoma who were killed during World War I are listed in the death records.

Canadian and U.S. census records⁹⁷ are a major source of demographic information not only for historical demographers but also for demographers interested in current population trends. Canadian census records for the years 1871, 1881, 1891, 1901, 1906, 1911, 1916, and 1921 are available at the Library and Archives Canada website.⁹⁸ The decades of interest for our study range from 1870 through 1940, when the first wave of immigrants from Pavlokoma immigrated to the New World.⁹⁹

The various record sources also provide either direct or indirect birth data. For example, ship-manifest records include an immigrant's age when he or she landed in the United States or Canada. The immigrant's date of birth is estimated from the information on the manifest and is considered indirect birth data, which can vary up to one year. The most common ports of departure for immigrants from Pavlokoma were the German ports of Hamburg and Bremen.¹⁰⁰ Most immigrants to the United States during the years 1870–1914 arrived at Castle Garden¹⁰¹ or Ellis Island in New York, or in Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, or Galveston, Texas. Border crossings by immigrants between Canada and the United States frequently occurred, and a paper trail was generated as a result of their movements.

Several political and societal events in Canada and the United States curtailed the flow of first-wave immigrants, including those from Pavlokoma. East European immigrants in Canada also suffered during World War I: more than 5,000 Ukrainian¹⁰² «aliens» from Austria-Hungary were interned during the war.¹⁰³ Once that war began in 1914, there was a marked decline in arrivals from Europe. Restrictions continued even after the war and were inten-⁹⁹ The 1870 U.S. census was the first to include surnames of villagers from Pavlokoma. Unfortunately, the 1890 census records were destroyed during a fire that occurred in 1928.

¹⁰⁰ Bremen's manifest records were destroyed owing to lack of storage space or during the Allied bombing of the city during World War II. Only a few thousand records survived.

¹⁰¹ Castle Garden became the principal U.S. immigration centre in 1855. In 1892 it was replaced by the facilities on Ellis Island.

sified during the Red Scare following the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917.¹⁰⁴ The Palmer Raids of 1919–20¹⁰⁵ further fanned anti-immigrant sentiments in the United States. Widespread American negative attitudes toward East European immigrants resulted in official restrictions. Federal laws limiting immigration from Eastern and Southern Europe and the Far East originated in the U.S. Senate with the formation of the Dillingham Commission in 1907.¹⁰⁶ The commission's reports provide significant information and statistics about the immigrants from Eastern Europe, the conditions they faced, and the places they where they lived and worked. The commission's 1911 report provided the basis for the 1924 U.S. Immigration Act, aka the Johnson-Reed Act, which introduced severe restrictions and quotas on immigration and «limited the number of immigrants allowed entry into the United States through a national origins quota.»¹⁰⁷ Once enacted, the «law tightened the quota system, setting quotas at 2 per cent of each national group residing in the country in 1890, favoring immigrants from northwestern Europe. A second part of the Act replaced the 1924 quotas with a limit of 150,000 immigrants admitted each year; a percentage allotted based on the 1920 census, resulting in 87 per cent of the immigrants admitted from northwestern Europe.»¹⁰⁸

2-5. Introduction to Record-Linkage Methodology

By creating various Pavlokoma data sets, it became possible to assign personal identification numbers to the various individuals identified in each spreadsheet and to proceed with the process of linking the spreadsheets.

Record linkage defines the task of finding and bringing together data of the same entity in different data sets. Two types of record linkage are used in demographic studies: deterministic linkage and probabilistic linkage. Comparing one or more variables is the approach used in deterministic linkage. The alternative, probabilistic -linkage methods rely on mathematical and statistical theory and algorithms like those Fellegi and Sunter developed in 1969.¹¹⁰ Their generalized record-linking software identifies three main phases in linkage, searching, decision-making, and grouping. Conceptually, each record in one file is compared to each record in another file to form record pairs of all possible comparisons, where, in «practice, in the searching phase, the files are blocked using identifiers (e.g., the phonetic code of the surname and gender code) to limit the number of potential pairs of records compared.»¹¹¹

To complete a viable linkage, several organizational and standardization steps must first be applied to the key birth records. Ideally, given names and surnames are standardized. This was not always the case in our various data sets, yet we were able to provide positive linkages. The given name for John, for example can be written as Jan, Ivan, Joannes, or Johann. Peter can appear as Petro or Piotr. Since the variable strings used to link records utilizes only the first letter of a person's given name the various spelling does not matter if the first letter is the same. Differences could be accommodated depending on the linkage method used. Once a linkage was made, we had to determine whether the two linked records were a match, near match, or non-match and then decide whether the two records represented the same person.

Surnames often appear as spelling variants in the metrical and civil records. Mudryk may appear as Mudrik, Potichnyi as Potoczny, and Petrowicz as Piotrowicz or Petrovych, to cite just a few examples. The algorithm we used to identify surnames could generally accommodate the spelling variations. Otherwise, specific spellings were adopted. Female names varied as well, depending on whether the individual was single, married, widowed, or divorced.

Variations in the spelling of names will always remain, and researchers must be able to deal with this phenomenon.¹¹² The correct identification of individuals and their linkage in various data sets leads to robust demographic studies and valid conclusions.

2-6. Family Reconstitution

Historical demographers traditionally define family reconstitution as the process of collecting historical data about family membership and describing the relationships among family members. Reconstitution also involves understanding the changes that occur over time. E. A. Wrigley et al define reconstitution as «in essence the systematic assemblage and articulation of information about the life histories of families.»¹¹³ Eli Fure noted that in «the 1970s and 1980s there were several attempts to automate family reconstitution, or what has become known as record linkage. Not only families but also individual life cycles were reconstructed.»¹¹⁴

2-7. Family Structure

Family reconstitution by its very nature requires researchers to describe or categorize various types of family structures. Dennis Willigan «began increasingly to view the family and/or household as a fundamental unit of analysis.»¹¹⁵ Other demographers, ¹¹² Modern day linkage techniques are common in law enforcement and in the medical professions. They use complex algorithms to ensure that various records represent the same individual. We developed a coding system that identified every individual in our data sets as being unique.

including Steven Ruggles,¹¹⁶ have often categorized families as joint, stem, or nuclear and generally followed the definitions French sociologist Frederic Le Play set forth. Le Play identified a joint family as one with two or more children remaining with parents after marriage. A stem family is one when only one child remains with the parents after marriage. Once all the children marry and leave home, family unit becomes a nuclear family according to Le Play's definition. The family structure of the Pavlokoma households can be assigned to one or more of Le Play's characterizations. This, in turn, yields insights into both the village's family structure and migration patterns of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

2-8. Cohort Studies

In this type of longitudinal study, a cohort is defined as a group of individuals with similar characteristics. Researchers may opt to concentrate on cohorts representing fertility, nuptiality, mortality or migratory trends. Throughout this book we define several cohorts that are the subjects of analytical studies.

2-9. Life-Course Studies

Demography and life-course theory intersect when researchers bring together data on individuals, families, and societies and the changes that take place on an individual and societal basis. According to Janet Z. Giele, «Life course refers to a sequence of socially defined events and roles that the individual enacts over time».¹¹⁷ Peter Uhlenberg recognized the mutual attraction between demography and comparison of family reconstitution data and used the intersection in aging studies.¹¹⁸ Life-course studies can find application in demographic studies of Pavlokoma, especially when investigating individuals or cohorts on a longitudinal basis. Graphic representation of an individual's life course illustrates the profound impact that societal, religious, economic, or political influences, such as wars, economic failures, famines, or epidemics, can have on life-course events. Subsequent decisions and outcomes are the natural result of these stresses.

Life-course events that have an impact on individuals and their trajectories include their birth, marriage, childbearing, education, divorce, retirement, aging, declining health, military service, migration, incarceration, naturalization, occupation, death, the death of their spouse, the death of their child, buying or building a house. Sociologists often develop lifelong case studies for individuals and subject their stories to longitudinal analysis based on various life-course techniques. They attempt to rationalize how a life-course event tracks and influences an individual's life. Genealogists also construct individuals' life stories. Biographies and memoirs often yield considerable life-course data and can be useful references when conducting life-course research or family reconstitution.

CHAPTER 3: COLLECTING THE RECORDS

3-1. Introduction to Models and Methods

During the decades since the introduction of historical demography as a formal field of scientific inquiry, complex mathematical and statistical models and theoretical methodology began evolving. These models and methods gave rise to enhanced demographic analyses of past populations as well as in-depth demographic conclusions. We attempt to introduce readers to several of these models and methods, especially to linkage techniques for the records we collected.

Our goal was to identify as many villagers born in Pavlokoma as possible. In turn this required us to develop a method for assigning a unique identity code to each of these persons—the Pavlokoma Personal Identification Number (PPIN). Our study's spreadsheets contain PPINs for individuals whose birthdates are known or can be estimated. Each PPIN contains alpha numeric variables that represent the individual's surname as an American Soundex code. The variable sequence starts with the first letter of the individual's given name, followed by his or her gender and variables that represent the last three of their birth year. A tenth variable designates which cohort the PPIN represents (a single capital letter) and is used only when needed. The personal identification system allows us to compare PPINs in the various data sets and provides a basis for recreating a family structure or analyzing various cohorts. The rules governing the generation and use of PPINs are listed in Chapter 4.

3-2 Cross-Sectional vs Longitudinal Analyses

Cross-sectional and longitudinal analyses are two methods that we frequently conducted using the Pavlokoma data we collected. Cross-sectional studies compare different individuals or cohorts with the same characteristics. A longitudinal study involves the repeated testing of the same individual or group of individuals over time. Alternatively, a cross-sectional study compares multiple segments of the population at the same point in time.

Cross-sectional research has no interest in changes over time. Our immediate challenge was defining the relevant questions that could be answered by manipulating the data sets. We asked whether our studies focused on individuals, families, or cohorts. Once we had the answer, our next question was concerned with what specific data were required. Finally, information was extracted, manipulated using either cross-sectional or longitudinal techniques, and analyzed. Typical cross-sectional examples regarding Pavlokoma are the number of females who married as teenagers on an annual basis or the number of males older than eighty when they died. An example of a longitudinal study could be related to the annual measurement of marriages in Pavlokoma or the annual measurement of multiple births. We performed these and other studies on our Pavlokoma data. They are summarized in subsequent chapters and appendices.

3-3. Data Cleanup and Standardization

Data cleanup and standardization are the tasks that immediately follow the introduction of data to a spreadsheet or data base. Once the records satisfactorily met our requirements, they were arranged in spreadsheets. Data cleanup or cleansing was undertaken on our Pavlokoma data set to remove corrupt or inaccurate records, blank spaces, duplicates, and typographical errors.¹¹⁹

Whenever attempts are made to link record sets, the data must be as error-free and as consistent as possible across each set. Consistency is the hallmark of a standardized record set. Data cleanup is equally important in order to ensure proper linkage and valid assumptions.

3-4. Interpretation of the Records

Many of the records used in our research, especially the Pavlokoma parish records¹²⁰ for the years 1784–1843 were exclusively hand-

¹¹⁹ Data cleanup was performed only on values that changed. The approach used to manage the Pavlokoma data set was to include a data dictionary in each spreadsheet to catalogue the steps taken to clean up data and standardize information.

¹²⁰ The parish in Sielnica was once a filial church ministered to by Pavlokoma's priest. Its metrical records can also be found in the Przemyśl State Archive. In later periods they were also written in Latin or Ukrainian.

written in Latin¹²¹ in columnar form with a few Polish passages. Interpretation of the contents and the various priests' handwriting was necessary to avoid transcription errors. The metrical records contain the dates when principal life events occurred: a person's birth, baptism, marriage, death, and of burial. The priests wrote the months¹²² in several ways, including in Latin, Church Slavonic, Polish, Ukrainian, or in abbreviated script.¹²³

Pavlokoma's early Ukrainian Orthodox metrical records were likely written in Church Slavonic.¹²⁴ The Greek Catholic parish's records were written either in Latin or Ukrainian. The change from Latin to Ukrainian coincided with the establishment of the Western Ukrainian National Republic in 1918 and lasted to 1936.¹²⁵ Polonization attempts were initiated once the Polish government was fully established, when the resumption of recording parish records in Latin was resumed. The fall of Poland in 1939 as result of the German and Soviet invasions revived the change back to the records being written in Ukrainian once again for a short period, from 9 February 1940 to 10 July 1942, before they were written in Latin once again.

House numbers can be found on the birth record sheets and usually indicate a family's residence. Bielawa¹²⁶ asserts that precautions need to be exercised when interpreting the house number, since it may be the location of birth rather than the father's home, or perhaps the grandparents', midwife's, or a neighbour's home. The practice in Pavlokoma was the mother giving birth in ¹²¹ The Roman Catholic Church officially used Latin until the Second Vatican Council allowed the adoption of national languages instead. Latin was never the liturgical language in the Greek Catholic Church, which used Church Slavonic until switching to Ukrainian, though certain documents, correspondence with the Vatican, and a small number of publications remained written in Latin.

¹²² Matthew Bielawa, «Months,» <http://www.halgai.com/months.html>.

¹²³ The months of September through December were often abbreviated as 7bris or viibris, 8bris or viiibris, 9bris or ixbris, and 10bris or xbris.

¹²⁴ Pavlokoma's parish records were written in more than one language at different times. We also encountered other records written in either Ukrainian, Russian, Latin, English, Polish, German, or, on rare occasions, Old Church Slavonic. The reasons for such diversity are not understood beyond the fact that records pertinent to our study have been preserved were in several local, regional, or national archives. Researchers interested in Eastern European demography must be prepared to deal with multiple languages.

¹²⁵ Ukrainian lands were divided among several states, and the Ukrainian people fought to establish their own state in 1918–21, 1938, and during the Second World War.

¹²⁶ Matthew Bielawa, «House Numbers as Found on Vital Records,» www.halgai.com/house%20number.html.

the marital home, or in her parents' house if she lived there with her husband.

The same can also be said of marriage records where the number of the groom's house was most likely that of his father (unless the groom had his own house by then). The prevailing situation in Pavlokoma was multiple generations of a family, even a large one, living in one house. Usually, newlyweds lived in the husband's or his father's house. In very rare instances the new husband would move into his wife's house.

Researching house numbers is further complicated by the fact that in Pavlokoma they changed several times over the centuries. The houses marked on the village map were numbered not according to their location but to the order in which they were built.¹²⁷

3-5. Record Quality and Quantity

Data quality¹²⁸ refers to the validity and accuracy of the record source. It is generally considered high if it meets the researcher's requirements during operations, planning, or decision making. The quantity of our Pavlokoma demographic data averaged 41.2 vital events per year when only looking at the records from the Greek Catholic church.

¹²⁷ House numbers also appear in cadastral records and in various documents pertaining to land ownership.

¹²⁸ There are multiple definitions of «data quality,» depending on whether one approaches the subject from an information technology (IT) or a demographic standpoint. Multiple criteria for assessing data quality exist, such as relevance, readability, and uniqueness, to name but a few.

CHAPTER 4: EVERYONE IS UNIQUE

4-1. Everyone is Unique

The focus of this chapter is to establish the personal identity information¹²⁹ required for record linkage and ultimately for the family reconstitution studies described in Chapter 5. Our identification methodology is identified as the Pavlokoma Personal Identification Number (PPIN). Each PPIN contains the following alpha and numeric variables in a string to uniquely identify an individual who appears in a data set. Variables 1–4 use the American Soundex Code to represent the individual's surname. Variable 5 in the string is the first letter of the individual's given name; variable 6 is his or her gender; and variables 7–9 represent the last three digits of the individual's birth year. Variable 10 (designated by a single capital letter) is the cohort the PPIN represents and is used only when needed. For example, the PPIN assigned from the birth records to Mykola Petrovych (the grandfather of this book's coauthor, Peter Yakob), who was born in Pavlokoma in 1875, is P362MM875B.

4-2. Why an ID System Is Needed

Authors of reconstitution and most other demographic studies must be able to retrieve and match surnames in various data sets and conclude with reasonable certainty that the records represent the same individual. Personal identification numbers (PINs), including our PPINs, must meet these challenges and should possess the qualities of permanence, accuracy, and uniqueness. The PPINs are essential for the proper linkage of the various Pavlokoma data sets. The various linkage models are also described in this chapter.

¹²⁹ We handle the coding of surnames in record sets in a manner similar to methods used in most industrialized countries including Canada, the United States, and in Europe. Such techniques provide personal identification numbers for governmental, medical, and insurance data sets to identify and track individuals. The U.S. Social Security Number (SSN), the Canadian Social Insurance Number (SIN), and medical patient identification numbers are three readily recognized numbering systems in use.

4-3. Introduction to Record Linkage

Once we had cleaned up the data sets and generated the PPINs, the next step in our Pavlokoma study was developing a record-linkage strategy. Record linkage refers to finding similar records in different data sources, thus providing a basis for family-reconstitution studies. The manual and labour-intensive methods linking parish records that Henry and his contemporaries developed in the early 1950s formed the basis for reconstitution techniques, which ultimately led to the creation of the interactive linkage algorithms used in high-capacity computers.¹³⁰

4-4. Description of the Variables Used to Create the PPINs

The variables making up the PPIN variable strings include the American Soundex code, and the initial of the person's given name, their gender, and the last three digits of their date of birth (D.O.B.). Additional variables are defined whenever the need to create a unique identifier arises.

The American Soundex code. The U.S. National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) routinely archives, retrieves, and manipulates millions of the surnames in its census and immigration databases. NARA staff developed their indexing system around a phonetic name compression algorithm commonly referred to as the American Soundex coding system.¹³¹ Several phonetic compression algorithms are available for use as identifiers, but the Soundex coding system was adopted because it is relatively simple and easy to use and because the Pavlokoma set has a relatively small number of surnames.¹³²

The Soundex code for a surname consists of the first letter of the person's name and digits encoding the three remaining consonants. Consonants at a similar place of articulation share the same digit. Thus the labial consonants B, F, P, and V are each encoded as the number 1.

¹³⁰ W. E. Winkler, Record Linkage Software and Methods for Merging Administrative Lists, <https://www.census.gov/content/dam/Census/library/working-papers/2001/adrm/rr2001-03.pdf>.

¹³¹ NARA, The Soundex Indexing System, <https://www.archives.gov/research/census/soundex.html>.

¹³² Appendix 6 (Villagers' Surnames) contains the list of American Soundex codes used to create the PPINs of the surnames in the various Pavlokoma data sets.

The NARA Soundex value retains the first letter of the name and drops all other occurrences of a, e, i, o, u, y, h, and w. The remaining consonants are replaced with digits after the first letter.¹³³ For example, the Soundex code for the surname Mudryk is M followed by 3 for the letter d, 6 for the letter r, and 2 for k, i.e., M362. Soundex codes can be generated manually or by using one of many Soundex generators found online. We chose to insert VBA coding, which automatically generates the American Soundex Code in each spreadsheet.¹³⁴

Given names. The string variable that follows the Soundex code is the first letter of the individual's given name. Most of Pavlokoma's metrical records Pavlokoma were handwritten in Latin, Ukrainian, Polish, or a combination of Latin and Polish. Depending on the language used, both the surname and the given names were spelled according to that the language. For example, «Ivan» would be the transliterated version of the Ukrainian name, whereas «Joannes» would be the Latin form.

Two problems arose when adding names to the spreadsheets in this book. The first issue was to determine the spelling of a name as written by a priest or civil servant.¹³⁵ Interpretation of the handwritten records could result in mistaking one letter of the alphabet for another and having to deal with abbreviations or partly or totally missing information. Therefore, we decided to use the given name as it was recorded in the original document.

The second issue was to decide which form—Latin, Ukrainian, or Polish—of the person's given name to use. Various data sets use different languages, but fortunately the Soundex codes of the surnames listed in Appendix 6 are mostly the same in all three languages. The authors decided to use the given name spelling as recorded on the original document rather than trying to interpret the name using another language. The reasoning behind ¹³³ The American Soundex Code identifies six digital categories to identify remaining consonants: b, f, p, and v → 1; c, g, j, k, q, s, x, and z → 2; d and t → 3; l → 4, m and n → 5; and r → 6.

¹³⁴ Visual Basic for Applications (VBA) is the programming language used by Microsoft® programs, including their Office® suite, which includes Excel®. Macros can be created using VBA language to simplify or automate record manipulation tasks.

¹³⁵ The most troublesome with regards to spelling were the ship-manifest records. When recording names from the manifest to the spreadsheet, we decided to use the name as it was written down, even if it was misspelled, to enable future researchers to the record if necessary. But we did not use the misspelled name when generating the Soundex code on the spreadsheet. Instead, we selected a surname that best represented the individual.

the decision was to keep the integrity of the record intact thereby making it possible for scholars to find individual names on the original document if they so desired.

Gender. Gender is the fifth variable in the PPIN string. The identifiers used are male (M), female (F), or unknown (U).

Identifying an individual's dates. Parish records supply the birth year for individuals born in Pavlokoma but do not record the birthdates of their parents, grandparents, or others whose names appear in the birth record. Parish marriage records include the year the marriage took place and the ages of the married couple. Death records record the year of death and age of the deceased. Migration records provide the year of immigration and the immigrant's age upon arrival. The last three data sources provide enough information to estimate the birthdate for use in an individual's PPIN. Often persons identified in all the data sets do not have a recorded birthdate. If this was the case, we developed a method of estimating their dates of birth by using generational time.

PPIN extensions. Extensions in the form of a single capitalized letter were added at the end of a standard PPIN to identify the cohort to which an individual belongs. For example, «P» indicates a parent, and «G,» a grandparent. A complete list of PPIN extensions is in Table 4-10.

4-5. Generation Time

Generation time «is the average interval between the birth of an individual and the birth of their offspring.¹³⁶ The interval varies from 20 to 25 years, the range that genealogists often use. But Kenneth M. Weiss considers 27 years as a more appropriate estimate, based on his analysis of prehistoric burial sites.¹³⁷ The 27-year generation time is used in this book to determine birth-year differences between the first-born child and each parent.¹³⁸ Often ¹³⁶ «Generation Time: Statistics,» <https://www.britannica.com/science/generation-time>.

¹³⁷ Kenneth M. Weiss, «Demographic Models for Anthropology,» American Antiquity 38, no. 2 (April 1973): 1–39.

¹³⁸ Refinement of the ages when the parents married and the subsequent birth of their first child results when the medium marriage ages are estimated for the entire cohort set. Whenever the 27-year figure is used, the assumption is made that both parents were born in the same year, which is hardly ever the case. Using a single age will, however, allow the researcher to have a general sense of when the parents were the birthdates for earlier generations were not recorded in parish records, requiring us to develop other means to establish their birthdates. We resolved this problem by estimating ages based on the child's birthdate and by introducing generational age differences. Metrical records for Pavlokoma can be considered both direct and indirect data. Birth records contain the exact birthdate for the individual and therefore are considered direct data. These same birth records contain the father's, mother's, and often the grandparents' names, but not their birthdates. When calculating the generational birthdate, one must be careful to use the birth year of the couple's first-born child, otherwise calculating birthdates for the parents and grandparents become increasingly inaccurate. It was assumed that these individuals were born in the same village as their first child. Birthdates based on generational data provide estimates that would otherwise be unknown. Generational birthdates also provide birth-year estimates for villagers born before 1784, the period when Pavlokoma birth records are unavailable. The use of this technique is considered indirect demographic data, as exemplified in the following table.

Table 4-1. Estimated Birthdates Based on Generational Time

The actual birthdates for the first two records are unknown because records prior to 1784 are unavailable. One limitation of using a single age to calculate the parents' birthdates is assuming that both parents are the same age, which is usually not the case. The issue was resolved by calculating average age differences of the entire birth and marriage record sets for both the mother and father. The validity of the age estimates and underlying assumptions was tested by linking various data sets. The average age for grooms and brides is estimated, and the results are substituted in the calculations for generational time. Formulas and their underlying assumptions were developed in order to estimate various individuals date of birth (D.O.B.).

Formulas for Estimating Birthdates

Groom's D.O.B. = date of marriage minus age at marriage

Bride's D.O.B. = date of marriage minus age at marriage

Parent's D.O.B. = Groom's D.O.B. minus 27 years

Godparent's D.O.B. = Groom's D.O.B. minus 27 years

Best man's D.O.B. = Groom's D.O.B.

Grandparent's D.O.B. = Child's D.O.B. minus 54 years

Deceased's D.O.B. = the year they died minus their age when they died

Baptismal records contain the names of the godparents (in Latin: patrini), while marriage records contain the names of the sponsors. Often the godmother was the wife of a respected adult male chosen from either rite to be the godfather. Often the best man (druzhba) or a bridesmaid (druzhka) became the godparent(s)¹³⁹ of the first-born child.

¹³⁹ In Ukrainian the parents call their child's godparents kum and kumá (fem.). Children call their godmother «khresna máma» or «khresna», and their godfather «khresnyi bat'ko» khresnyi, or «bat'ó». The godparent must be at least fourteen years old. Usually, well-established older persons were chosen to be sponsors. If these assumptions hold true, then the godparents' and wedding sponsors' birthdates can be estimated.

Table 4-5. Indirect Data Comparisons

Assumptions were made regarding the relative age differences of the various cohorts, such as the groom and sponsor (best man).¹⁴⁰ Based on the limited data set, on average the sponsor was 8 years older than the groom.

The generational time for Pavlokoma can also be refined by analyzing the marriage-record data in Chapter 6. The grooms' and brides' average age can be estimated, and the results substituted in the calculations for generational time. The marriage records in Chapter 6 and the death records in Chapter 7 also contain indirect data about birthdates.

Table 4-5. Estimates of a Person's D.O.B. Using Marriage-Records

Groom's Birth Year = date of marriage minus his age at marriage

Bride's Birth Year = date of marriage minus her age at marriage

Deceased's Birth Year = year of death minus their age upon death

¹⁴⁰ This age difference between groom and his sponsor seems reasonable when considering that the groom likely selected a close friend to participate in the marriage ceremony. Refinement of the age differences can be made when additional marriage data are available.

4-5. PPIN Rules

The creation and application of PPINs using the variables described earlier are subject to the following rules.

Give every individual a unique PPIN.

Use the male versions of surnames for both males and females when creating PPINs. Do not use the Ukrainian or Polish suffixes (-a, -ova, -owa) that identify the surnames as belonging to females.

Use the first letter of the person's given name for variable number 4 in the PPIN string. For example, the PPIN for Petro Mudryk, who was born in 1889, is broken down as follows: Soundex (M362), given name's initial (P), gender (M), last three digits of birth year (889). Use the spelling as recorded on the record, i.e., if the name is written in Latin as Joannes, then use J; but if the person's Ukrainian first name, in this case Ivan, is recorded on the metrical record, then use their initial, in this case I.

If the same male surnames have different spellings, refer to Appendix 6 for the one we used to generate the American Soundex number in this book. If the name is not on the list, it will need to be generated using a NARA Soundex generator.

Use the spelling of the father's surname to identify females.

If the female's surname at birth is used, create the PPIN with the suffix N (for «née») only if needed to eliminate duplicates in the primary key spreadsheet (birth records).

Use the following capital letters to identify the individual's gender (Variable 5): M for males, F for females, and U for unknown.

Use the last three digits of the individual's birth year (e.g., 1801 = 801) for PPIN variables.

Whenever twins have given names starting with the same letter, add the lower case second letter in the name besides the capitalized first initial. For example, the initials of the twin brothers Peter and Paul would be Pe and Pa respectively.

On rare occasions, two or more individuals with the same surname, first initial, sex, and birth year will occur. In this event, add a lower-case letter at the end of the birth year to distinguish their PPINs: e.g., A-M907a, A-JM907b, A-JM907c, etc.

If the surname is not known, use the Soundex code for the word «Unknown»—U625.

If the first initial of the given name is unknown, use upper case «U» as the initial.

When stillbirths are identified in the church records as Vidi, use «Vidi» as the Soundex code, e.g., Vidi807 would be the PPIN of the child stillborn in 1807. If more than one stillbirth is recorded in a given year, replace the second «i» with a numeral, e.g., vidi802, then vid2802, vid3803, ... vid n 802.

If the surname is known but not the Soundex code, use the first initial followed by three hyphens, e.g., O'leary would be O--. Replace the dashes with the Soundex code once it becomes known.

Suffixes may be attached after the normal 9 variables in the PPIN string. The suffixes may be used to separate the same individuals in the primary data set (Birth Records), marriage partners, grandparents, godparents, or sponsors. Gender distinctions for suffixes are not necessary because they already exist in the string.

PPINs of Earlier Generations. The use of PPINs can be extended to include the birth year of parents and grandparents based on the birthdate of the child as described in Table 4-2. We chose to use the generation time of 27 years to establish the birth year of parents, and 54 years for grandparents when their birth year is unknown.¹⁴¹ Two issues arise whenever birthdates are calculated for earlier generations. The first concerns the parents' age at marriage, and the second is when the married couple gives birth to their first child. We suggest that two years after marriage is a reasonable estimate to use for when the first child is born and for estimating the brides' and grooms' age at marriage and ultimately their birth years. If, for example, a child is born in 1900, the parents are assumed to have married in 1899 or 1898, and so their estimated birth years would likely be 1871 or 1872. Researchers need to validate these assumptions and understand that they are merely a starting point for estimating when parents or grandparents were born. The reasonableness of these assumptions can be tested whenever the PPINs in the data sets are linked and reviewed. The parent's age generated with the estimated birth year should link with that individual's actual birth year recorded a generation earlier.¹⁴² The second precaution when estimating the birth years of earlier generations centres on using the birthdate of the first-born child. Birth years derived from migration records could vary up to one year, because the migrant's age upon the date of arrival is used to estimate the birth year.

Godparents' and Wedding Sponsors' PPINs. Birth and marriage documents record the names of godparents or sponsors but seldom list their ages. We have generated PPINs for these two cohorts by making similar assumptions to the ones we used to estimate the parents' birth years relative to their child's birth year. When estimating the birth year for wedding sponsors, assumptions must be made regarding the relationship to the bride or groom. The wedding sponsor is either of the same generation as the bride or groom or belongs to an earlier generation.

¹⁴² The age of the parents at the time of marriage will be the same when applying a single generational estimate, which is usually not the case. The remedy for this oversimplification can be applied once the marriage data set is analyzed and average ages for brides and grooms can be established and substituted into birth estimates for the PPIN. Whenever the two PPINs show a difference in birth years, the researcher must decide what is an acceptable variance to consider the probability that the two PPINs represent the same individual.

The photograph¹⁴³ below suggests that the eight Ukrainian gentlemen are all roughly the same age and that some of them participated in each other's weddings and were likely godparents for each other's children. Whenever these assumptions can be validated, it is then possible to estimate the birth ages of the various participants. The consequence of the assumptions not being true is that the generated PPIN birthdate may be off by a generation. If, for example, Nicholas Petrowicz asked Peter Mudryk to be his best man or vice versa and if Nicholas's age is known, then an estimate can be made of Peter's birthday. As it turns out, both Peter and Nicholas were the godparents of several of each other's children. If an attempt is made to estimate the age of Peter or Nicholas based on the god child's age, one must bear in mind that there is a single generation gap between the birth child and the godparent.

The given names found in various documents can vary depending on which ethnic or societal group generated the document. For example, Pavlokoma's metrical records before 1918 were written in Latin, and governmental civil documents, especially immigration and emigration records, were in either Polish or German.

Surnames. Male surnames were recorded as found in the original document. Ukrainian names were transliterated using the Latin alphabet. Every attempt was made to determine a female's maiden name. In the case of birth and marriage records, the father's surname was used. Death records were a different matter because they did not always provide the maiden names of deceased females. We chose to use the father's surname when determining the Soundex code and consequently to drop the traditional Ukrainian and Polish suffixes (-ova, -owa, ivna, ownna) in the females' surnames. If a woman's surname was determined to be her married name, the letter m was added to her PPIN. The suffixes in both male and female surnames were recorded as they appeared in the original documents.

Ship Manifests. One-or two-page manifests manifests were written down at the ports of departure (e.g., Bremen, Hamburg). Each contained a maximum of thirty passenger names that accompanied the immigrants to their American ports of entry. Upon arrival each immigrant wore a ticket pinned to their lapel marked with the same number written on the manifest. Most genealogists agree that no spelling changes were made at the point of entry.¹⁴⁴ Spelling problems occurred either at the ports of departure, or years later when archivists attempted to interpret the name in the original manifest. We recorded the names as they appeared in the manifests, archival printouts, census records, and other sources so that researchers would be able to locate the original source documents.

The Soundex numbers were introduced to manage misspelled names in the manifest spreadsheet. The Soundex number we generated reflect our best estimates of the correct spellings of the surnames. Inclusion of a passenger's Soundex number allowed us to generate their PPIN.

4-5. Record Privacy

Record availability is often limited based on restrictions by civil, as well as ecclesiastical, rules and regulations. The U.S. Census Bureau records, for example, do not release enumeration sheets for 72 years, whereas Canada requires that 92 years elapse before they release the census. Polish civil records are subject to similar privacy restrictions¹⁴⁵ even to this day, making Pavlokoma record retrieval difficult in some instances.

Privacy issues are of paramount importance in medical records, and many civil record sources containing linkage algorithms. Privacy rules are developed to protect the identity and privacy of patients or individuals. Genealogical databases also protect the identity of living persons. The records in our Pavlokoma collection were collected from readily accessible public sources and do not infringe upon the privacy of the individuals concerned.

4-6. Linkage Models

A major reason why PPINs were created was to facilitate linkage of the same individual in the various Pavlokoma data sets. Demographers have developed various mathematical methods that compare variable strings such as the PPINs data sets in order to link them together. One of the methods, deterministic matching, is a straightforward comparison of two variable strings such as PPINs.

The other commonly used model, probabilistic matching, compares each variable in a string and presents the researcher with a match ratio. William E. Winkler, a statistician at the U.S. Census Bureau, described the use of complex statistical and mathematical algorithms to link string variables using a probabilistic approach.¹⁴⁶ An example of a probabilistic linkage would be ¹⁴⁵ Polish privacy laws require that most civil registration (birth) records remain private for 100 years, and death and marriage records for 80 years.

¹⁴⁶ Winkler, Record Linkage Software.

matching «Peter Fedak» with «Petro Fedak». Both names represent the same person, but different string variables must be dealt with to determine a match, a likely match, or a non-match. Each name in this example has 10 variables, of which 9 match each other. A perfect match resulting from a probabilistic model would create a ratio of 1.0, a likely match a 0.8 to 0.9 ratio, and a non-match a ratio of less than 0.8. These ratio rules are determined by the individual performing the linkage study.

Once records are linked, the files will likely contain two types of errors—false positives and false negatives (missed matches). False positives are matches that do not represent the same person, whereas false negatives represent records for the same person that have not been brought together but rather reside in a file under different identifiers. Algorithms are usually developed to estimate the rate at which these two types of error exist.

The linkage models described in this chapter require rigorous mathematical development to produce the desired outcomes. It is up to our readers to research linkage models at the levels that go far beyond those used in this book.

4-7. Deterministic Record Linkage

Deterministic linkage is also known as rules-based linkage. The methodology is based on comparing linkage criteria that apply to each record pair, which has a PPIN associated with it. Deterministic linkage typically depends on the exact matching of key criteria. Pavlokoma data sets include PPINs in the birth, marriage, death, and migration spreadsheets. Deterministic linkage models work best when the data set is small and when a unique identifier exists, such as a SSN, SIN, or PPIN, and has equal weight.

The deterministic models have both strengths and weaknesses. Deterministic linkages are relatively simple to make and suited to smaller data sets, such as the Pavlokoma data. This type of linkage can be complicated by the fact that PPINs for a given individual may not be the same in all data sets, primarily due to variances in birth-year calculations. The age discrepancies can be overcome by establishing linkage rules.

4-8. Probabilistic Record Linkage

Probabilistic linkage should not be ruled out if expansion of the Pavlokoma data increases in the future or if sophisticated family reconstitution or life-course studies demand rigorous demographic analyses. In probabilistic linkage, also referred to as fuzzy matching,¹⁴⁷ each variable is compared and a score (weight) is assigned based on how well it matches.¹⁴⁸ In computer-based probabilistic record linkage models developed by Ivan P. Fellegi and Alan B. Sunter in 1969,¹⁴⁹ pairs are identified in a Cartesian system as three independent and mutually exclusive subsets that together allow estimating the probabilities of match, non-match, and possible match sets.

In probability matching, a threshold of likelihood is set (which can be varied in different circumstances) above which a pair of records is accepted as a match relating to the same person below which the match is rejected. This threshold is the match ratio, above which a linkage pair is considered a match and below which the pair is considered a non-match.

Probabilistic linkage is suited to large data sets and requires sophisticated algorithms to compare variable strings.¹⁵⁰ Its techniques can be costly in terms of time and effort. Pavlokoma metrical and migration data sets can be subjected to probabilistic linkage, but the development of algorithms for use on high-speed computers will require significant time and expense to develop. Justification is warranted if research outcomes include development of significantly larger data sets, such as census and other civil registration files.

¹⁴⁷ «Microsoft Fuzzy Lookup Add-In for Excel,» <https://atidan.files.wordpress.com/2013/08/fuzzy-lookup-add-in-for-excel.pdf>. Fuzzy matching is a specialized record-linkage technique. We adopted Microsoft's Fuzzy Lookup Add-in when linking several of the spreadsheets. The add-in generates a probability ratio using the Jaccard Index of Similarity.

¹⁵⁰ A wide range of variables or strings are used in development of a probabilistic linkage model, each of which has a unique weighting characteristic. A matching technique referred as edit distance measures the number of operations (insertions, deletions, or substitutions) that are needed in order to change one string to match the other. Such distance measurements are often identified as the Jaro-Winkler distance or the Levenshtein edit distance.

4-9. Introduction to the Pavlokoma Spreadsheets

We chose to use spreadsheet technology as the primary tool to link and evaluate various Pavlokoma data sets. The Pavlokoma birth records serve as the primary key to which all other spreadsheets (foreign keys) are linked. The architecture of each spreadsheet (workbook) is made up of one or more sheets, the first of which is titled «1: Data Dictionary». The dictionary contains all information the user needs to describe the workbook and data sources. It is used by the researcher to record updates, modifications, or manipulations of the workbook.

The second workbook sheet («2: Records») contains the individual data records. The third workbook sheet («3: Analysis») contains a listing of the analyses and methods used to manipulate the records found in sheet two. Sheet four («4: Analysis Results») is the workspace and repository of the results of the data manipulations. A given workbook may contain more than the basic four sheets if additional information or records are to be captured. An example may be to include a separate sheet for all the individuals with the same surname (for example, «5: Fedak Family») found in the linked and sorted records. The inclusion of maps (example, «5: 1852 Map of Pavlokoma» in Appendix 7 and its larger version on the back cover) in the Neighbourhood workbook would be another example of additional sheets added to the workbook.

CHAPTER 5: BIRTH RECORDS

5-1 Birth Records: A Historical Review

Birth records provide historical demographers with the fundamental data needed to research population and fertility changes. The Pavlokoma birth-record workbook is structured in a manner that allows us to investigate the village's population as well as individuals born there. The makeup of the birth-record spreadsheet is based mainly on parish and, to a lesser degree, civil records.

Birth records contain data that are demographically significant both for population research and for studies of individuals and their families. In this chapter we shall introduce details of Pavlokoma parish's birth records and how that data is integrated into the workbook. We shall also describe how the birth records are linked to other spreadsheets, including the ones containing marriage, death, and migration records. The structure of each of these workbooks is essentially the same and follows information technology criteria.¹⁵¹

We shall also describe in this chapter the historical contextualization of Christianity and record keeping in the Pavlokoma area. In 1563 the Council of Trent mandated that births and marriages be recorded at the church parish level.¹⁵² The earliest that the Byzantine rite in Pavlokoma existed is not known, but it could have been from the earliest acceptance of Christianity. Under Austrian rule after the first partition of Poland, «Roman Catholic clergy were appointed as official civil keepers of vital records by an imperial decree of March 15, 1782,»¹⁵³ and civil authorities further mandated that as of February 1784 priests, including those of the Greek Catholic rite, maintain ecclesiastical records as civil registers. The types of information to be recorded and their format were prescribed.

The bishop or his representative periodically held a soborchyk («small synod») of the priests in his diocese, during which most of these documents were inspected. Eventually all «[p]riests were obligated to keep books divided into three parts: births, marriages and deaths»¹⁵⁴ to make duplicates and send one at the end of the year to the diocese office, where the bishop inspected them periodically and verified their completeness and accuracy.

The duplicate sheets, submitted to the diocesan administration in columnar form,¹⁵⁵ form the basis for the Pavlokoma spreadsheet's architecture.

Pavlokoma's Greek Catholic parish records can be found in the Przemyśl State Archive¹⁵⁶ and date back to 1784, when the civil authorities first required them. Information about Pavlokoma's Roman Catholic villagers can be found in the metrical records of two nearby villages, Sielnica and Dylągowa.

The wooden Church of St. Mary the Protectress was built in Pavlokoma in 1787,¹⁵⁷ the same year during which the imperial authorities first mandated the registration of births and baptisms. The church was later damaged in a fire, and it is possible that then the church's records may have perished then. According to the Lviv historian Ivan Krasovs'kyi, the church was rebuilt in 1879.

except for a few found in various genealogical sources. Inventories of vital records less than 100 years old are held at the local Polish Civil Registry Office (Urząd Stanu Cywilnego, or USC). The USC in Dynów has Pavlokoma's church and civil records. It is not known whether the records held inside the Church of St. Mary the Protectress survived after the massacre of Pavlokoma's Ukrainian villagers on 3 March 1945 by Polish Home Army soldiers. The prevalent assumption is that the records were destroyed.

The information on each birth-record page includes the child's name, the dates of their birth and baptism, the parents' names, and often the grandparents' names. The godparents' names¹⁵⁸ (patrini) are also part of the record. Some death dates are included, especially if the child was stillborn or died at an early age.

Column 4 on each Pavlokoma birth record contains a house number, which represents the location where the child was born, which was usually the parents' home. House numbers can also be found on various cadastral maps and records. Caution must be exercised when referring to Pavlokoma's house numbers, because they changed several times over the centuries.

The names listed on a birth record include those of the birth child, the parents, the grandparents, the sponsors (godparents), the midwife, and the priest. PPINs are assigned to each of them except the midwife and priest. Most priests were not born in Pavlokoma, and the midwife should have already be assigned a PPIN. Once PPINS were assigned, linkage to the other relevant spreadsheets was possible.

5-2 Record Linkage

Linkage methodology was discussed in the previous chapters, including deterministic and probabilistic techniques. Because of their mathematical and programming simplicity, we used deterministic strategies to link the various Pavlokoma spreadsheets. Owing to powerful linkage methods associated with modern-day spreadsheet technology, we also adopted the Microsoft Fuzzy Lookup applications during our spreadsheet manipulations of the various spreadsheets described below. Using VBA Soundex applications and algorithms to generate PPINs further simplified the tasks of sorting and record linkage.

¹⁵⁸ Godparents have a special significance in the culture of Catholic families. They are expected to provide for the care and religious upbringing of the godchild. The godparents often take the child to church to be baptized, and in some instances, they are responsible for naming the child. They are likely the first to be invited to their god child's wedding, a tradition that has often been continued within the Pavlokoma diaspora.

5-3. Birth Record Spreadsheet Structure

Each of the spreadsheets described above is similarly structured. A workbook can be considered a file folder that has several sheets, each of which may contain separate data files or spreadsheets. Spreadsheet developers typically assign the first sheet of each workbook the title of Data Dictionary.¹⁵⁹ The Pavlokoma workbook collection has a data dictionary as the first sheet, which contains information such as data sources, descriptions, spreadsheet architecture, algorithms, formulas, definitions, clean-up strategies, and other information that developers or users will find useful.

5-4. Birth Record Construction

Sheet 2, titled «Working Data,» contains information gathered from the original data source. The birth records (+3,500 listed births) are found in the appendices. We had to limit the information presented to two print pages. It was therefore necessary to «hide» many of the columns that will only be available in digital form. The following table describes the birth-record columns included in the book, as opposed to the data contained only in the digital form.

Every attempt was made to record the data in the original parish birth records as separate columns on the spreadsheet, thereby enabling us as well as future researchers and demographers to sort the information however we and they desire.

5-5. Individual vs Cohort Studies

Pavlokoma's birth records and associated spreadsheets form the basis for both individual and cohort studies. Birth records can be used in several ways to study individuals, families, or various cohorts. For example, perhaps a genealogist might be interested in a particular surname or family, such as the Mudryk clan. The birth data can be sorted and manipulated to serve the researcher's needs.

Cohorts are groupings whose members share a distinguishing feature or common events, such as birth, marriage, death, or migration characteristics over a period or at a specific time. Total fertility studies would be an example of a cohort study performed over a long period, whereas a study of stillbirths in a given year represents a cohort study at a given period. Cohort and life-course studies are two types of longitudinal analyses that allow demographers to study changes over time. Potential longitudinal and cross-sectional studies of Pavlokoma's birth records could include, but are not limited to, the following:

The seemingly low number of births in Pavlokoma between 1844 and 1864 is due to the lack of birth records during those years. The number of births declined during World Wars I and II.

Figure 5-5 represents Pavlokoma's entire birth-record data set. Understanding the population dynamic of a country or region—whether it is growing, declining, or steady—is of ongoing interest to demographers. The development and refinement of the Demographic Transition Model (DTM)¹⁶⁰ in the 1930s and 1940s laid the groundwork for population-transition research. There are four transition stages in the DTM: stage one represents the pre-industrial period, during which the level of both births and deaths was high; stage two is generally characterized by a decline in death rates, which in turn leads to population increases; stage three reflects low death rates, lower birth rates, and generally improving economic conditions; and stage four is characterized by low birth and death rates, signaling a stable population. Graphic representation of the DTM can be developed once appropriate demographic data become available. Figure 5-6 is an example of a generalized demographic transition model.¹⁶¹

The four DMT stages provide demographers with the necessary insights to develop population pyramids.

5.6. Population Analysis

One of the common areas of demographic study is that of population structure, growth, and decline. Birth records can provide the information required when census records are absent or limited. Population (aka age-sex) pyramids are frequently used to characterize a population. Population pyramid data is typically derived from multiple census records, and the pyramid's four shapes describe the prevailing stage of a population. The population pyramids are linked to various DTM stages.

The development of population pyramid data (PPD) indicating the number of females and males in various age groups living in the year under review requires the use of a simplified life-course model to select data from birth, marriage, death, and migration records. Basic questions regarding the status of individuals in the PPD cohort include:

Was the individual alive during the PPD year?

How old was the individual during the PPD year?

What was the gender of the individual?

Did the individual migrate before the PPD year? If the answer is «yes,» the individual must be eliminated from the PPD population count.

Population pyramids were generated for the years 1787, 1800, 1842, 1912, and 1938 from available data to evaluate the status of the population in Pavlokoma during these years. We evaluated the economic, environment, and political influences that may have impacted the growth or decline of both the local and national populations.

The Pavlokoma population pyramids for 1787 and 1800 are indicative of a stage 1 or stage 2 population transition during a period of growth when children did not migrate easily. This period represents the era when serfdom controlled the lives of the agrarian population. Large families were a benefit to both the peasant farmer and the owner of the manor. With the partition of Poland in 1772 and again 1793, Pavlokoma became part of the Austrian-ruled Crownland of Galicia.

Between 1782 and 1807 there were widespread outbreaks of influenza, typhus, and cholera (see Table 7-3) in the territory that included Pavlokoma. The 1800 PPD might reflect the resulting decline in the 0-10-year age group.

The 1842 pyramid is truncated because demographic data for persons older than 65 is not available. But the shape of the 1842 graph suggests a period of growth in Pavlokoma despite a decline in the 10-25 age group. This likely represents the out-migration of younger adults to western Europe.¹⁶³

The 1912 pyramid represents the period when economic migration was at its height, just before World War I. It is also truncated because data was lacking. But it suggests that during that period the population was declining.

The 1939 pyramid is also truncated because data for those older than sixty-five is lacking. The pyramid does, however, reflect an aging population. The 1930s were also a decade of increased immigration, especially to South America.

The graphic development of Pavlokoma's population pyramids in various years provides a basis for determining whether the population was growing, steady, or in decline. The years recommended for developing these pyramids were determined by the availability of data and societal and prevailing political circumstances. The years 1842–43 were the last ones before the abolition of serfdom in the Austrian Empire in 1848); emigration from Pavlokoma then was likely very low owing to restrictions and data for that period are unavailable. The 1912–13 population data reflect the high emigration levels before World War I, the restrictive U.S. immigration laws of 1921 and 1924, and the sale of Pavlokoma properties to incoming Polish colonists in 1921. The 1938–39 data represent the village before the ravages of World War II and its immediate aftermath.

5.7. Family Reconstitution

Because gender and birth data were available when we were creating the simplified life chart, the PPINs aided us in developing the PPD. The family reconstitution tables were also derived from the linkage of the major demographic spreadsheets. Table 5-3 contains the PPINs that are found in the birth records, which can be linked to the other demographic spreadsheets if the records' date ranges are inclusive. The combined information helped us to reconstruct the families and provided data about the family structures and life-course events. The example in Table 5-3 links Daniel Lanczak's birth record with his marriage and death records. The PPIN in his birth and death records is the same. His parents' PPINS also match. No matches for Daniel were found in the marriage, immigration, or other data sets. His grandparents and witnesses were also identified as a result of the linkage.

According to the data extracted from the linkage process, Daniel was born in 1776 and died in 1834 at the age of 58. His parents' years of birth were first estimated as 1803. A manual search of the birth-record data set (Appendix 1, record no. 299) indicated that Daniel's father, Basylius Lanczak (L522BM801B) was born in 1801 rather than 1803 and that his parents were Petrus Lanczak (L522PM774P) and Ewa, néeTerlecki (T642EF774P). We were unable to find any marriage record for Daniel. A further manual search of the marriage records (Appendix 2, record no. 40) indicated that Petrus and Ewa were married on 24 October 1792. A manual search of the death records (Appendix 3, record no. 503) indicated that Basylius Lanczak (L522BM805D) died from pleurisy in 1839 at the age of 34. The death records (record no.726) also showed that Petrus Lanczak (L522PM764D) died at the age of 60 and that his wife Ewa (L522EF757D) died at the age of 85. It is up to the researcher to determine if the results of a manual search are positive matches.

Most of the above PPINs searched agree within a range of a few years and were refined once various data sets were linked. The starting point during a search of each data set is to use the assumed D.O.B. that is in each birth record PPIN. Female maiden names can often be determined once records are linked. Other names mentioned in the various data sets, such as the godparents' or witnesses', can also be manually searched to expand the re-constituted family and the life-course events. Searches and record linkages using digital data sets are obviously less time-consuming.

5.8. Areas of Demographic Research Related to Birth Records

Birth records¹⁶⁴ linked with the marriage, death, migration, and neighbourhood records provide the data required to analyze when young couples marry, whether they are of the same ethnic group and religion, and when the females gave birth to their first child. Fecundity and fertility trends are a few of the research analyses that can be derived from this data set. Population studies and the construction of population pyramids may be time-consuming but very useful in describing the growth or decline of Pavlokoma during various periods of its history. The village's population in 1787 reflects a period during serfdom when migration rates should have been extremely low. The shapes of the 1787, 1800, and 1842 population pyramids suggest that Pavlokoma underwent a rate of overall growth. The 1842 pyramid reflects the status of Pavlokoma's population just prior to the end of serfdom. Development of a population pyramid reflective of the period immediately after abolition of serfdom would have been preferable, but, unfortunately, there is a lack of available data for over half a century from 1844 to 1898. The period prior to 1912 reflects a high rate of emigration abroad from Pavlokoma up until the beginning of World War I. The emigrants from Pavlokoma during this period were representative members of the first wave of Ukrainian immigrants who settled in the United States and Canada. Their departure from Pavlokoma contributed to the village's population decline. The population pyramid for 1939 also appears to reflect a decline in births during the period before the impact of World War II and the destruction of the village in 1945.

5-9. Birth Record Data Manipulation and Analysis

The four steps described below provide a path for researchers to follow in order to analyze the data found in the various Pavlokoma workbooks.

Step 1: Combine the Workbooks.

Step 2: Decide what type of analyses are to be conducted.

Step 3: Determine the linkage and look-up strategy.

Step 4: Create the output, draw conclusions, and repeat the process.

CHAPTER 6: MARRIAGE RECORDS

6-1 Pavlokoma Marriage Records

This chapter examines the records of marriages that took place in Pavlokoma during the eighteenth through the mid-twentieth centuries. The Greek Catholic parish's marriage records make up most of the data and provide the names and ages of the married couples. Linkage of these records with other spreadsheets provided demographic data regarding nuptiality, fertility, and fecundity. In this chapter we shall also examine the courting and marriage traditions of the Ukrainians in Pavlokoma.

6-2. Marriage Traditions in Pavlokoma

Ukrainian wedding (Ukrainian: vesillia) traditions, including those observed in Pavlokoma, can be traced back to pre-Christian times. The rituals, activities and songs survived until the village's destruction in 1945, but it is hoped that some were still practiced by the Pavlokoma diaspora. Peter J. Potichnyj recalls the marriage rituals that couples, including those in his extended family, practiced.¹⁶⁵ He further stated that the external manifestations of Polish weddings in the village—eating, drinking, dancing, and merrymaking—were similar to those of Ukrainian traditions. However, the Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic marriage ceremonies were different.

The traditional wedding ritual started with an official courting called svatannia. Matchmakers (the svaty) would visit the prospective bride at her home (usually her parents' house) to present a marriage proposal on behalf of the groom. If the offer was accepted, the svaty would be draped with embroidered towels. If it wasn't, they would be handed a small pumpkin, a symbol of rejection. This would usually occur only if the offer of marriage came from a man who did not have prior consent from the intended maiden.

Once the the proposal was accepted, the bride's dowry (prydane) was discussed and agreed to by the fathers of the betrothed.

¹⁶⁵ See Potichnyi, Pavlokoma, 207–14.

The bride's father paid a ransom (vykup), usually a bottle of liquor, to the best man and his helpers when they arrived at the bride's house to escort her to the church. The betrothal officially took place in the church with the exchange of rings during the marriage ceremony.

Wedding preparations included the baking of traditional ornamented wedding breads, called korovai, by women in the village who were highly respected by the community and close friends of the bride and groom's families. The parents invited the korovai makers to bake two loaves that would become part of the wedding ceremony. One of these korovai was presented to the priest just before church ceremony. The korovai were also used in traditional bread and salt offerings.

Another Ukrainian wedding tradition was the parents' ritual blessing (blahoslovennia) shortly before the marriage ceremony.¹⁶⁶ Another tradition was having the bride and groom stand on an embroidered cloth (rushnyk) during the ceremony. After the priest had blessed them, he tied the bride and groom's hands with the rushnyk and led them around the small altar three times as a symbol that their mutual life's path had begun.

The wedding ceremony at Pavlokoma's Greek Catholic Church of St. Mary the Protectress usually took place on a Sunday morning, but on occasion it was held on a Saturday instead. The couple was accompanied by their parents, other relatives, godparents, wedding sponsors, and many neighbours and friends. The bride's father did not give away his daughter. Instead, she and the groom walked together to the front of the church, where the marriage ceremony and exchange of vows took place. The bride brought with her the rushnyk that the priest used to tie their hands together.

Once the ceremony was over, the parents presented the newlywed couple with bread and salt and the groom presented the parents gifts. Then everyone present celebrated the occasion by gathering to dine on elaborately prepared dishes, drink, and sing. The festivities sometimes lasted for days, depending on the wealth of the newlywed couples and their families.

Marriage customs in Pavlokoma, as well as in other Carpathian villages, were highly structured events. Many brides were still teenagers, while the grooms were typically a few years older. It was unusual for brides to be 13 years old or younger. In Pavlokoma's marriage records the youngest bride was 14 years old.

¹⁶⁶ See A. Markian. «Ukrainian Catholic Weddings,» Markian & Anna blog, 10 May 2014, <https://markianandanna.wordpress.com>.

Mixed marriages between Roman Catholics and Greek Catholics villagers occurred but were not common in Pavlokoma. The accepted tradition for children born into mixed marriages was daughters adopting their mother's religion, and sons their father's.

When individuals emigrated, they did maintain, but not all, of Pavlokoma's marriage traditions, such the betrothal practices and wedding attire, in their new countries of residence. Several of the immigrants married persons who also came immigrated from Pavlokoma.

6-3. Marriage Laws and Customs in Eastern Europe

In the Habsburg Empire the church's struggle with civil authorities for control of marriages and matrimonial law continued for decades¹⁶⁷ before the church reluctantly ceded that control to the state. This change ultimately decided who had legal responsibility for record generation, storage, and availability. Divorce was a highly contested topic that precipitated frequent political debates during the nineteenth century.¹⁶⁸ The parish marriage records of Pavlokoma's Ukrainians from 1784 to 1898 contain no information about divorces. They must have occurred, but accurate records regarding their number and circumstances are unavailable.

Husbands' attitudes and treatment¹⁶⁹ toward their wives and in general have been studied by sociologists and anthropologists at great length.¹⁷⁰ Marriages in the nineteenth century in Eastern Europe in general and in Pavlokoma in particular were generally considered to have been paternalistic in nature. Paternalistic attitudes had impacts and consequences for spousal relationships, a family's structure, emigration, and ultimately inheritance practices.¹⁷¹

The villagers living in Pavlokoma in the nineteenth century and earlier were mostly peasants.¹⁷² Accordingly, their marriage strategies were based on forming kinship alliances and economic units. Josef Ehmer has concluded that the «expectation placed on both the husband and wife was the ability of each to allocate and co-ordinate their own labour and that of other family members in flexible and varied ways. Agricultural workers had no other choice but to marry laborers.»¹⁷³ A large family was the peasants' greatest source of wealth.¹⁷⁴ In addition, «in villages with strong social stratification, marriage strategies primarily concerned class relations. The major tendency was towards the social endogamy,»¹⁷⁵ although some exogamic marriages between Ukrainian and Polish villagers in Pavlokoma did occur.

Sociologists and demographers have studied marriages in villages like Pavlokoma and compared them with the marriages that took place after villagers emigrated to various countries. They have also tracked the changes that occur when emigrants' children marry.¹⁷⁶ These studies have typically compared preindustrial agrarian societies with industrial, urban structures.

¹⁷¹ Polish inheritance law arose while its lands were under Prussian, Russian, and Hapsburg rule but was often modified by local traditions. Inheritance traditions and outcomes in Pavlokoma ultimately had impacts on who was likely to emigrate.

¹⁷² Examination of the Greek Catholic birth records indicates that the occupational status of most of the parents and sponsors was listed as «farmer» (Agricola).

6-4. Emigration in Search of a Marriage Partner

Twenty-seven of the 251 persons (both men and women) who married in Pavlokoma during the years 1784–1843 had migrated to Pavlokoma from other villages in search of a marriage partner.¹⁷⁷ They generally came from other villages along the San River that had many of the same surnames as the ones that were common to Pavlokoma. One such example is found in Peter Potichnyj's family records. According to Ivan Krasovs'kyi, in 1787 the surname Petrovych (in Polish: Piotrowicz) existed in only one Lemko village, Hlomcha (Polish: Hłomcza) near Sanok.¹⁷⁸ The records found in Potichnyj's Pavlokoma, 1441–1945 do not list any families named Petrovych families before 1820. However, Pavlokoma's marriage records of 1789 indicate that a Dimitri Piotrowicz, age 48, from Hlomcha married Agapia Szpak (-owna), age 24, from Pavlokoma. Figure 6-2 is a typical Pavlokoma Greek Catholic marriage record of Piotrowicz and Szpak's marriage in 1789. It is just one of several examples of migration along or near the San River to find a marriage partner. Marriage records in Appendix 2 often list the grooms' and brides' villages if they were not from Pavlokoma.

Villages along the San from which men migrated to Pavlokoma to find a marriage partner included Wołodź (Ukrainian: Volodzh), Sielnica (Sil'nytsia), Dynów, Żohatyn (Zhohatyn), Bachórz (Bakhir), Laskówka (Liskivka), Iskań (Iskania), Siedliska (Selys'ka), Bachórzec (Bakhorets'), Słonne (Slonne), Bartkówka, Dylągowa, Olszany (Vil'shany), Hłudne (Hlidno), and Łubno (Lubna). Most of these villages' inhabitants, except in Bartkówka, Dynów, and Dylągowa, were ethnic Ukrainian at that time.

Women also migrated from several of these villages in search of a husband.

6-5 Marriage Record Spreadsheet Structure

The structure of this spreadsheet was developed in a manner that captures the information found in the church records dating from 1784 to 1896 and includes the PPINs used to link to other workbooks.¹⁷⁹

¹⁷⁹ The data was obtained from Pavlokoma's parish records of 1784–1898. Additional marriage data can also be found in the birth, migration, and neighbourhood records described later in this book. Each of these sources were linked together in order to create the Pavlokoma marriage history.

6-6 Linkage Variables

PPINs link the Pavlokoma marriage record spreadsheet to the birth records and other spreadsheets. Birthdates for the bride and groom can be directly calculated from the information in the marriage record. The marriage date and age at marriage provide this information. Linkage with the birth records will provide an actual birthdate if the PPIN yields a match.

The birth records do not show the parent's year of birth. In order to establish the parents' PPINs, their first child's year of birth is used along with an estimate of the parents' age at marriage. The assumption was made that the first child was born within two years of the parents' marriage.

First child's year of birth = Parents' year of marriage
minus 2 yrs

E.g.: Year of Marriage = 1873

First child's year of birth = 1875

Parent's year of birth = 1875 minus 27 = 1848

6-7 Marriage Topics for Analyses

Marriage is a major area of interest for historical demographers interested in fertility, childbearing, and, in turn, population changes. Studies of various marriage cohorts can provide details about family structure and provide a framework for family life cycles. We chose to limit our discussion and analysis of marriages in Pavlokoma to fundamental demographic topics. The reader can pursue in-depth analyses of the marriage cohorts if desired.

For us, one of the first statistical requirements was determining the ages of the first-marriage partners. During the period of from 1784–1898 the average age at marriage was 30 for grooms and 24 for brides. The youngest female to marry was 14, and the youngest male was 18. The number of multiple marriages was 59 for males and 41 for females, equivalent to 112.0 and 77.8 marriages per 1,000 respectively. The average difference of first marriage was 6 years for females and 5 years for males. This contrasts with the average age difference of 1 year for widows and 13 years¹⁸⁰ for widowers respectively

CHAPTER 7: DEATH RECORDS

7-1. Pavlokoma Death Records

This chapter is devoted to demographic events surrounding the death of individuals from Pavlokoma. We also describe the various funeral and burial traditions, customs, and rituals that took place in Pavlokoma.¹⁸¹ The majority of records of persons who died in Pavlokoma came from the parish records of 1784 through 1843.¹⁸² World War I casualty records, inheritance files, and various Polish sources also yielded data regarding the death dates of Pavlokoma's residents. The 366 victims of the March 1945 massacre are listed in Appendix 24 and in the birth records (Appendix 1). The data was incorporated into the death record spreadsheet and linked with others in order to provide demographic analyses.

7-2 Funeral and Burial Traditions, Customs, and Rituals in Pavlokoma

Each society has long-standing funeral and burial traditions and beliefs about how a person transitions into the next life. According to the late Orysia Paszczak Tracz, «Long before the coming of Christianity, the Ukrainian worldview held that the family (i.e., also clan and nation) is composed of three parts: those living, those 'departed,' and those not yet born.»¹⁸³

¹⁸² Additional death records are found in Chapter 5 (Birth Records) and Chapter 8 (Neighbourhood Records). Parish priests also periodically provided statistics regarding the deaths of Pavlokoma's villagers in their financial reports. Although they did not name names, they summarized the number of deaths that occurred during the years 1879–1910 up to the age 1 (65 deaths) and from the ages of 1 to 7 (28 deaths), 7 to 15 (10 deaths), and over the age of 15 (64 deaths). During those 31 years there were 167 deaths in Pavlokoma; 103 of them were of children. See «Halyts'ke namisnytstvo m. L'viv, Tserkovni inventari: Documenta existensis parochiae rg in Pawlokoma in Circulus Sanocensi, no. 239,» TsDIAU, f. 146, op. 1781.

Christian burials were conducted in cemeteries typically located near church grounds. Such was the case in Pavlokoma during the early days of the village's Greek Catholic church. Eventually it became necessary to open a new burial site. A second Greek Catholic cemetery was opened where today's memorial to the victims of the 1945 massacre is located.¹⁸⁴ It was closed in the early 1940s. A third Ukrainian cemetery was then opened, but it was plowed over by the Poles shortly after the massacre and replaced by a Roman Catholic cemetery. Rituals associated with the preparation of a body for burial, the funeral, and the interment were meant to pay tribute to and honour the deceased. The traditions practiced in Pavlokoma generally followed those of most Slavic groups in the Carpathian region. The body of the deceased was taken to the family home for preparation and viewing. Villagers were informed of the death by the tolling of the large bell with the deepest tone at the Church of St. Mary the Protectress.¹⁸⁵

¹⁸⁴ The memorial was erected where the villagers were executed and buried in one of three hastily dug pits.

¹⁸⁵ The Austrian government required that a small building be erected in the cemetery to house the deceased. Pavlokoma did not have funeral homes as we know them, but there was a special morgue (truparnia) at the cemetery where suicides were kept before they were buried. With time that practice was discontinued.

When the death of a Ukrainian in Pavlokoma occurred, it was announced throughout the village. At the home of the deceased, his/her body was prepared for burial and the mourning rituals and recitation of prayers occurred. The deceased was then transported to the church, where the funeral service immediately took place. The deceased was then transported to the cemetery and buried. On-going commemorative rituals, in which folk beliefs, some with pre-Christian roots, played a significant part, occurred for some time thereafter.

In preparation for the funeral, a few female relatives and friends in the village washed the body of the deceased at his/her home, dressed the corpse in his/her finest clothing, and placed the body on a bench with a large candle at each corner. Local carpenters built the coffin, usually for free. The family of the deceased provided the paint (usually black), and the coffin's decorations. Poorer villagers buried their relatives in plain, unpainted coffins. When the coffin was delivered to the home, the body was placed in it and positioned so that the head of the deceased faced the icon corner in the home. Wealthier villagers often had ornamental decorations or handles affixed to the casket. The lid was left off the casket during the three-day ritual of mourning and prayers in the home. Because the deceased in Pavlokoma were not embalmed, their decomposition during the summer months was rapid, and the ensuing unbearable odors required windows to be left open. Despite these circumstances, the mourning continued, with cantors from the church, relatives, and other villagers praying over the deceased for the entire 72-hour period. The Greek Catholic prayers and liturgical ceremonies were recited in Old Church Slavonic until the twentieth century.¹⁸⁶ The cantors and others read from Church Slavonic texts printed in Cyrillic Ukrainian, which all literate Ukrainian villagers were able to read. The village priest would usually participate in the prayers at the home of the deceased and performed memorial services at the church for the repose of the departed—the panakhyda and the longer parastas.

The accepted Ukrainian folk belief was that the soul of the deceased remained near his/her body for three days and should never be left alone or in the dark so that mischievous spirits will not influence it.¹⁸⁷ Therefore candles were kept lit at the home throughout the night, and it was common for visitors to come to pay their respects especially at nightfall. Pavlokoma's villagers, like other Ukrainians, believed the soul remained near the body for 40 days.

¹⁸⁶ Latin was then the sole liturgical language in the Roman Catholic Church.

¹⁸⁷ Internet Encyclopedia of Ukraine, (2001), s.v. «Burial rites.»

Pallbearers would arrive at the end of the third day to transport the deceased to the church. The ritual of gently knocking on the coffin three times at the home's threshold was the family's way of saying goodbye to the deceased. During the early part of the nineteenth century, a horse-drawn wagon was used to transport the coffin to the church. During winter months, a horse-drawn sleigh was often used instead. The earliest funeral rituals involved using a sleigh for that purpose year-round. A reading from the Gospel was repeated several times on the road to the church. Deceased priests always received special funeral services.

The above 1882 painting by Teodor Axentowicz¹⁸⁸ depicts a Hutsul funeral procession during that time. Very few photographs of funeral rituals exist, but researchers can gain insights from the artworks of individuals such as Axentowicz. Oxen or horses drew the wagon carrying the priest, who was surrounded by the deceased's male family members and friends. Ahead of the procession villagers carried a large cross, flags, and church banners. There was also a custom in Pavlokoma to hire female lamenters to vocally lament and extol the deceased. These women and children followed behind the sleigh as they cried out and held lit candles. Similar customs existed throughout the Carpathian region.

Natalia Havryl'iuk¹⁸⁹ has described funeral rites and customs in Ukraine in detail, and also many of the superstitious beliefs that Ukrainians held. Prominent Ukrainians and feudal nobles were buried with greater ceremony than Pavlokoma's peasants. A deceased priest lay in church facing the congregation but with his face covered, and he was carried out of the church feetfirst, unlike everyone else, who were carried out headfirst.

The funeral liturgy at the church typically took place in the morning and the burial immediately followed. The family of the deceased paid for the services of a grave digger at the cemetery, or alternatively the grave was dug by neighbours who wanted to help. Greek Catholic churches and graves (but not Roman Catholic ones) faced southeast, toward the Holy Land. The priest «sealed the coffin» by touching the four corners of the grave with small cross, saying «The grave is sealed until the second coming of Christ.» A memorial meal, the tryzna, usually took place immediately after the burial, and often again on the ninth and fortieth days after the death. A priest performed a pre-arranged panakhyda that was held at the grave site after Easter and on the first anniversary of the death; usually participating were the deceased's relatives and friends, who shared a meal after the service.

7-3 Death Records

We found the majority of Pavlokoma's death records in our book in the Greek Catholic Eparchial Archive at the State Archive in Przemyśl. The Latin example in Figure 7-3 is typical of the parish records that make up the data in the Death Record Spreadsheet. The columnar form supplied by the dioceses had headings that included the day and month of death and the deceased's house number, name, religion, gender, age upon death, and cause of death. The year that the data was entered on the form was entered by hand in the upper left corner.¹⁹⁰

¹⁹⁰ The form in Figure 7-3 had «183» (i.e., the 18th century and the 3rd decade) printed on it in the upper left corner. The priest who filled out the form changed the «3» to «0» and added «7.»

The date of death and age upon death in each record established when the deceased was born. This information was subsequently used to generate his/her PPIN and allowed for linkage to the other demographic spreadsheets. The date range of the 847 death records we found in the Eparchial Archive were limited to the years 1784–1843.

7-4. Inheritance Traditions in Pavlokoma

Inheritance traditions among the Slavic peoples vary widely, but several legal principles applied, including separation of the property of the husband and wife and inheritance customs that followed the principles of impartibility and primogeniture.¹⁹¹ Family property in Pavlokoma was generally inherited by the eldest son, who then became responsible for providing for his widowed mother and his siblings. The prevailing inheritance strategy in Pavlokoma suggested that personal property, buildings, fields, and common areas, such as pastures and forested lands, traditionally passed on to the deceased's male children, unless, of course, there were only female offspring.¹⁹²

E. A. Wrigley has stated that «Historical demography lies in the area of overlap between the social and the biological, and demographic behavior is affected by both influences.»¹⁹³ He has suggested that inheritance strategies can influence demographic behaviour, and that a variety of life-course events he has listed, from fertility and fecundity to mortality and migration, are impacted by the various inheritance strategies.

Several individuals from Pavlokoma had wills drawn up and deposited at the Dynów court. The State Archive in Przemyśl has inheritance case files for Pavlokoma villagers spanning the years 1909–42, including 76 individuals' court records. We were able to obtain the files of deceased members of the Brenner, Aftanas, Potichnyi, and Mudryk families. The information therein is indicative of the demographic information available in the inheritance fonds. Several PPINs were generated from it and linked to the other spreadsheets.

7-5. World War I Casualties

The war casualty lists also provided names for Pavlokoma's death records. The service records of World War I combatants¹⁹⁴ can be found in various Austrian and Hungarian websites, including in the Digital Library of the National Library of the Czech Republic's archive.¹⁹⁵ Villagers from Pavlokoma¹⁹⁶ served in the Austro-Hungarian Army during World War I. Some were injured and taken prisoner, and at least ten died in combat.

¹⁹⁴ One of the priorities for the creation of cadastral records was the identification of villagers eligible for military service in the Austro-Hungarian Army.

¹⁹⁵ See <https://kramerius5.nkp.cz/search?q=Pawlokoma>.

¹⁹⁶ Mykhailo Lanchak was one of the casualties, and his wife received a widow's pension from the Austrian government. Lanchak's son Mykola was a tailor in Pavlokoma and is listed as such in the 1929 Polish business directory.

An interesting result of our research of casualties from Pavlokoma is the portrait found at the home of Petro Mudryk in McKees Rocks, Pennsylvania. There were no identifying labels on the portrait, but we believe the individual in the portrait is Johann (Ivan) Mudryk, who was born in 1882. He was the older brother of Petro, who was born in 1886 and who likely commissioned the portrait.

7-6. The Victims of the 3 March 1945 Massacre in Pavlokoma

A unique source of death records is the 366 victims massacred during 1-3 March 1945 carved on the Pavlokoma Memorial, which was dedicated 13 May 2006. These names are listed in Appendix 24 and in the birth records spreadsheet (Appendix 1) and the records of Pavlokoma's neighbourhoods (Appendix 5).

7-7 Epidemics and Pandemics

The last column in Figure 7-3 lists the cause of the individual's death. It was filled out by the parish priest in Latin using very general terms, such as «the individual died of natural causes or of old age.» The priests, while educated, did not have the medical skills to determine an individual's cause of death.

The limited number of Pavlokoma's death records and the short time span they represent also limited our ability to study the epidemics or pandemics that may have affected Pavlokoma over the centuries. It was therefore difficult to determine the specific dates of their occurrence or the severity of their outbreaks among Pavlokoma's villagers.

Various epidemics and pandemics—the Black Death, cholera, typhus, tuberculosis, Spanish flu, and pneumonia—decimated Europe's population throughout the centuries. Pavlokoma and nearby villages were likely not immune to several of these maladies—a cholera epidemic occurred in nearby Dynów in 1830.¹⁹⁷

Researchers generally agree that in the fourteenth century the Black Death did not ravage the lands of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth as much as it did in western Europe. Several hypotheses have been raised regarding this lower occurrence rate. Isolation, possible differences in the rat population, the climate, rural versus large city populations, border quarantines, and even genetic immunity were a few of the purported reasons for the Commonwealth's relatively low incidence.¹⁹⁸ Pavlokoma's castle and fortifications may have existed at the time of the Black Death, but there are no known records from that period. Therefore, we can only speculate whether Pavlokoma or its environs escaped the bubonic plague's ravages. The chronology of epidemics and events impacting morbidity in Eastern Europe and possibly Pavlokoma are listed in Table 7-2.

The morbidity rate, which was always higher in large cities, likely resulted from poor personal hygiene, environmental conditions, and lack of access to bacteriologically healthy drinking water.¹⁹⁹ The repatriation of Polish prisoners from Russia after World War I also played a part in the spread of infectious diseases.

Comparison of Table 7-2 and Figure 7-6 above provides insights about health conditions in Pavlokoma, especially during serious outbreaks of infectious diseases.

7-8. Death Record Analysis

Pavlokoma's death records provide only limited information about mortality and aging owing to the limited amount of data. We did, however, estimate the mortality rate during the years 1784–1843.

Comparison of Figure 7-7 with Table 7-2 provides insights regarding the causes of death during periods of plagues or epidemics. The death spikes in Pavlokoma during the years 1788–94 may have been caused by the influenza and typhus outbreaks shown on Table 7-2. The increase in deaths in the 1830s was caused by the cholera outbreaks that struck Poland and Pavlokoma.

After 1843 mortality rates in Galicia spiked. Unfortunately, the records of deaths in Pavlokoma shown on Figure 7-8 are missing for the years during the 1831–79 or were unavailable to the authors. The spike in deaths in the 1940s can be largely attributed to the 1945 massacre in Pavlokoma. Increased mortality rates from the 1890s to the 1930s can likely be attributed to influenza and cholera outbreaks.

Children aged 0 to 5 made up over 40 per cent of the deaths. Middle-aged persons (35 to 50 years old) were mostly peasant farmers. Few people lived beyond the age of 80.

The top ten causes of death were ranked by frequency. The natural cause and ordinary categories account for 46.7 per cent of all the deaths in this data set. Stillborn (vidi) deaths accounted for 1.5 per cent of all deaths during the years 1784–1843. Villagers died of angina and influenza in 1834 and again in 1849. Dysentery caused the deaths of 10 children in 1788 and recurred in 1792, 1794, 1810, and 1811. Measles and mumps caused the deaths of many children in 1830 and again in 1840. The exact number of each occurrence was not recorded.

Twenty-three drownings in the San River were recorded between 1784 and 1843, likely because of floods in the late winter and early spring. The death records indicate that eight of these persons drowned on one day, Tuesday, 4 April 1826. That they were all young adults suggests that they died in a boating accident.

Ten people died in 1788 as result of being attacked (they may possibly have been the 10 cases of «Grafsante» deaths in Table 7-3), but no details were provided.

We were able to establish the crude death rates for the years 1784, 1840, and 1945. Pavlokoma's population figures were available for the years 1900, 1909, 1921, 1929, 1930, 1932, 1936, and 1939, but not annual mortality data. The spike in the 1945 crude death rate was the result of the massacre in Pavlokoma that year.

We were able to establish the crude death rates for the years 1784, 1840, and 1945. Pavlokoma's population figures were available for the years 1900, 1909, 1921, 1929, 1930, 1932, 1936, and 1939, but not annual mortality data. The spike in the 1945 crude death rate was the result of the massacre in Pavlokoma that year.

CHAPTER 8: PAVLOKOMA'S NEIGHBOURHOODS

8-1 Pavlokoma's Neighbourhoods before 1945

Pavlokoma's neighbourhoods changed over time as new houses were built, individuals inherited property, ownership changed, and citizens migrated to and from the village. In this chapter we describe the changes and focus on the village as it existed just before its destruction in March 1945.²⁰³ Also included in this chapter are descriptive details about the houses, structures, fields, and gardens.

Recently researchers have described the use of cadastral maps as aids in historical demographic research.²⁰⁴ Geo-spatial data and analysis tools have become available to a wide range of researchers and academic disciplines, including historical and (historical) demographic research. Ekamper has suggested that geo-spatial information can be linked to longitudinal census and population data to describe population densities and various life-course events of interest to demographers and sociologists.

Many of Pavlokoma's records include house numbers for a given year,²⁰⁵ including their cadastral documents. The latter are important because they describe the size and makeup of the village, including the land-owning population's ethnicity during the mid-to late eighteenth century, when the Josephinian and Franciscan land surveys were conducted.²⁰⁶ When combined with other mi-

²⁰³ Peter J. Potichnyj determined the location of the houses and neighbourhoods, and the surnames of their residents based on his recollections in consultation with Ol'ha Koshtov's'ka-Chervins'ka. Both lived in Pavlokoma during the 1930s and 1940s. Data also comes from our analysis of maps showing the number of houses in the village during various periods, as well as from the cadastral records accompanying the cadastral maps.

²⁰⁵ House numbers changed overtime and often reflect the order in which houses were constructed. This may have resulted in sequential house numbers occurring on the opposite side of the village and not necessarily in the same neighbourhood.

cro-level longitudinal data sets, the cadastral information can provide researchers the information they need to reconstruct the life-course and corresponding micro-geographical events.²⁰⁷

The information we gathered about the number of households in Pavlokoma gave us an idea of the village's growth rate. Investigation of earlier political and economic situations during the feudal period and partitions of Poland also helped us to understand the factors that influenced the development of Pavlokoma and its neighbourhoods' structure.

Before the partitions, feudal Poland competed with Russia for land and influence. Lithuania and parts of Ukraine were part of the Polish state, and feudal lords owned extensive areas and villages, including Pavlokoma. Ownership of that village passed from Piotr Kmita to a succession of powerful Polish landlords, who controlled the inhabitants' lives and destinies. The entire sub-region of western Galicia was mostly agricultural and desperately poor during the feudal era, except for a brief period during the reigns of Maria Theresa and her son Joseph II. During their rule, Polish Jews were not permitted to own property, and later they were not permitted to be involved with the manufacture, distribution, or sale of alcohol. However, by «the late nineteenth century, the Jewish occupational profile was 15 per cent leaseholders and tavern keepers, 35 per cent merchants, 30 per cent artisans and 20 per cent miscellaneous occupations.»²⁰⁸ The number of Jewish residents in Pavlokoma was relatively insignificant compared to their number in Dynów and neighbouring Dubiecko. Their status improved during late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.²⁰⁹

²⁰⁸ Suzan Wynne, The Galitzianers: The Jews of Galicia, 1772–1918 (Kensington, MD: Wheatmark, 2006), 30.

²⁰⁹ Jews in Galicia were often harshly treated, and many were forced to immigrate to Hungary during the eighteenth to twentieth centuries. In many instances they were not permitted to speak Yiddish and were often excessively taxed. Most of the Jews were not farmers and they struggled to find occupations that Polish nobles allowed during the feudal period. An occupation that was permitted was that of tax collector for the Polish landowning nobility. This position often fueled jealousy and resentment among the peasants.

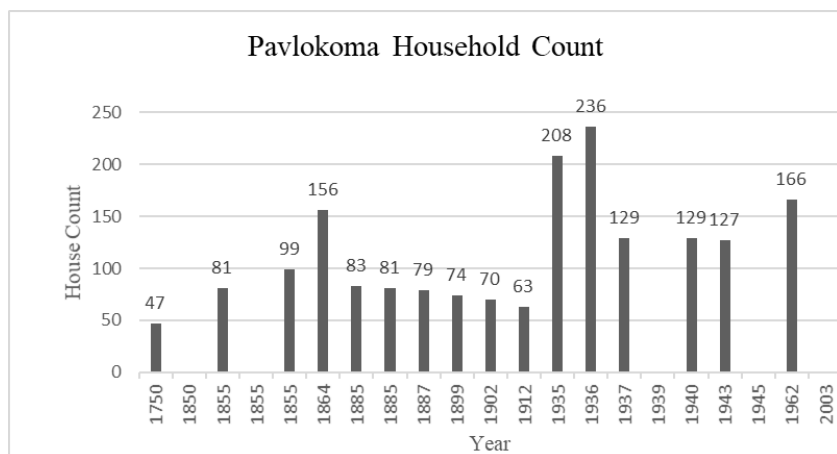

Figure 8-1. The Number of Houses in Pavlokoma

There was only one Jewish farmer in Pavlokoma in the early twentieth century. Under Austrian rule and later, the Jews were not persecuted because of their language. There was also a large Jewish school in Dynów.

Although economic conditions after feudalism improved for the various ethnic groups in Pavlokoma, political tensions between Ukrainian and Polish villagers did not. The situation began to deteriorate immediately upon reestablishment of Poland after World War I and after the failed 1919 attempt to establish a separate Ukrainian's state. Resentment over the sale of land owned by Polish nobleman Seweryn Zaremba Skrzyński to Jan Sokolik, Jakub and Aniela Chrapek, Szymon and Teresa Radoń, and Tomasz and Wiktoria Bułdys increased among those Ukrainians who lost the land their forefathers had owned. Some of the most fertile land along the San River bottom was sold only to these Polish individuals. Many came from nearby villages such as Bartkówka, Sielnica, and Dylągowa. The new arrivals to Pavlokoma would become known as «colonists.» Although Polish-Ukrainian intermarriages occurred, the political, ethnic, and theological tensions that had begun centuries earlier were rekindled during the inter-war period. These tensions reached their climax in 1945 and resulted in the destruction of the Ukrainian village of Pavlokoma.

8-2 The Neighbourhoods' Dwellings, Structures, Gardens, and Fields

The design and structure of dwellings in Pavlokoma remained the same from the time of serfdom until 1945. There were only a few exceptions. Most of the villagers were peasant farmers barely able to rise above a subsistence level. While the owner of the village lived in a mansion on his manor, the peasants lived in huts rather than in the houses we envision today. A typical dwelling had one or two rooms and was constructed of wood. Its walls were finished with moss and clay and whitewashed with lime.²¹⁰

Unfortunately, there are few photographs of the dwellings and barns in Pavlokoma, and even fewer of their interiors. The only information about them comes from the recollections of former villagers, old postcards, and the 24 Ukrainian postage stamps depicting the exteriors and interiors of Ukrainian peasant houses in various regions that were issued in 2007.²¹¹

A different architectural style was introduced by the immigrants who returned to Pavlokoma after they had lived and worked for a time in Canada or the United States. Mark Wyman has described the new houses that were built across Europe as the nineteenth century was coming to a closed. They had tile or slate roofs instead of thatched ones, a view of the road, brick or white-plaster walls, and varnished doors with brass knobs.²¹² Individuals such as Dmytro Nalesnyk and the village school teacher Mykola Levyts'kyi apparently had sufficient funds upon their return from America to build substantial «Western»-style homes built of wood or brick with tin or shingled roofs. Levyts'kyi's house was very modern and constructed entirely of wood, while Nalesnyk's house was made of brick.

²¹² Mark Wyman. Round Trip to America: The Immigrants Return To Europe, 1880–1930 (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 1993), 127.

Wattle fences typically surrounded each home's yard. Barns and outbuildings with slate roofs, a well, and perhaps an underground cold cellar were common structures. A few individuals had a threshing barn (stodola, klunia),²¹³ a granary, a chicken coop and perhaps bee hives and a hay store on their property. A large garden and fruit trees were also a part of each Pavlokoma family's property.

The fields cultivated by each family were often located a distance from their yard. The crops grown each year varied. Feudal farming methods involved growing enough food to eat and pay the manor and priests. Little if any surplus was left to improve the peasants' lot.

8-3. The Neighbourhoods Workbook

The neighbourhood's workbook is similar in structure to the other workbooks in this book. The first sheet contains the data dictionary. The second sheet contains the records of the individuals who lived in each neighbourhood.²¹⁴ The spreadsheet also contains the names of Polish colonists born in Pavlokoma. The third sheet lists various types of data to be extracted from the neighbourhood records. Additional sheets include maps of Pavlokoma indicating the neighbourhoods' locations, the owners' names, and various landmarks.

8-4. Analysis of the Neighbourhood Records

The historical demographic analysis includes a sampling of all the individuals living in Pavlokoma in 1945. The difficulty of obtaining metrical records for Pavlokoma's villagers who were not Ukrainians of the Greek Catholic faith resulted in looking at other sources for the names of the Polish villagers. One such document, which we obtained at the State Archive in Rzeszów, was a handwritten table containing the names of all the Polish residents of Pavlokoma in 1953—nine columns of data for 224 individuals. In our study we have included only those Polish villagers who were born in Pavlokoma, but not anyone who arrived after the village had been purged of its Ukrainian inhabitants. These records are a reasonable substitution for the Roman Catholic metrical records we were unable to obtain.

The workbook contains more than 2,100 records of individuals who lived in nearly 163 of Pavlokoma's neighbourhoods.²¹⁵ The data we collected was used to create a thematic map that indicates where the buildings were located in 1945.

8-7. Maps of Pavlokoma's Neighbourhoods

We attempted to locate the villagers' homes, the neighbourhoods' names, and the various buildings and other landmarks that we found on maps that included a co-ordinate system.²¹⁶ The cartographic approach we used was to insert a photographic image of a map onto a spreadsheet page. We chose to use the 1850 cadastral map of Pavlokoma as our base. This base map was initially divided into quadrants. A set of movable reticles was then applied in order to locate the vertical (y-axis) and horizontal (x-axis) co-ordinates of each house on the spreadsheet map. The x-axis and y-axis of each of more than 200 houses and landmarks were determined in this manner.²¹⁷ Once all the houses and other landmarks were recorded, the overlaid symbols were transferred to other Pavlokoma base maps to compare changes that occurred over time. The reticles on the map below are centred on the co-ordinates (y:49, x: K.7) of the village's Greek Catholic church.

8-8 Cadastral Records

Beginning in the eighteenth century, the Austrian imperial government sent agents and surveyors to the realm's crownlands to map the fields, gardens, woodlots, and other lands in each village. A list of individuals who owned the land and fields was meticulously recorded along with the village's house numbers. One of the main purposes, besides land ownership, for the developing ²¹⁵ See Potichnyi, Pavlokoma, 312-440.

²¹⁷ A larger version of the map may be found on page i. In addition to the homes on the 1850 cadastral map, the co-ordinates of several other structures were added.

this cadastral material was to give the government a record of who was available for military service if the need arose. The information contained in the cadastral records was also useful in providing the Habsburg Empire a solid basis for the taxation of its citizens.

and Cadastral Staff in Galicia, 1846²¹⁸

The first cadastral survey of Galicia occurred when the region became an Austrian crownland—the Josephinian Cadastre (Josephinische Kataster),²¹⁹ which was authorized in April 1785 by imperial edict, was conducted until the autumn of 1788. Another survey—the Franciscan Cadastre—was conducted from 1819 through 1823.²²⁰ Field notes were developed on productive lands only for the Josephinian Cadastre. No maps were developed, but only field sketches that were destroyed once the assessments were

The cadastral maps were accompanied by a written register, in which details, such as the owners' names and their properties, were recorded». ²²³ Several cadastral maps of Pavlokoma exist and can be accessed in various archives in Poland (e.g., the State Archive in Przemyśl) and Ukraine (e.g., the Central State Historical Archive in Lviv, fond 19). The information provided can be of value to historical demographers as they develop their population studies.²²⁴

A complete set of cadastral records and registers would include field notes and field sketches, which would later be developed into the final cadastral book (Operat) containing the field numbers, the owners, and their house numbers. We had access to a field copy of the 1852 Operat but not to the final version. Our study of the cadastral maps and records along with other period maps allowed us authors to estimate the number of houses and buildings in Pavlokoma in various periods.

8-9. Spreadsheet Analysis of Pavlokoma's Neighbourhoods

The purpose of the spreadsheet was to identify the neighbourhoods that existed in Pavlokoma during the 1930s and 1940s. Information derived from the analysis of the records includes surnames of individuals who were not necessarily listed on other spreadsheets. We developed PPINs for them and linked them to the other demographically significant ones. More than 163 neighbourhoods were identified.

The ethnic ratios Pavlokoma's Ukrainians, Poles, Jews, and others were determined using the records in this source. The condition or status of the various individuals was recorded.²²⁵ Information derived from the records was used to supplement other records or used to compare or confirm the analyses of other demographic spreadsheets. This involved the calculation of gender ratios and estimates regarding nuptiality, mortality, and migration factors.

²²⁵ They were forcibly taken to work in the Third Reich, deported to Siberia, or conscripted by the Germans or the Red Army. Several of the Ukrainian villagers joined the underground UPA. The destinations of individuals in the Pavlokoma diaspora are also listed.

CHAPTER 9: MIGRATION RECORDS

9-1. A Historical Overview of Migration

Migration is a factor that historical demographers must consider when investigating population changes. This chapter is devoted to explaining the various types of migration²²⁶ and the reasons individuals chose to migrate to and from Pavlokoma.²²⁷ Their mobility included such push factors as overpopulation, the desire to find a marriage partner, political conflicts, poor local economic conditions, religious persecution, and escaping from disease. Pull factors involved the possibility of economic gain by engaging in seasonal or permanent work in other European countries and elsewhere. Mining and agricultural expansion in Canada and industrial expansion in the United States during the 1870s began attracting migrants from Eastern Europe, including villagers from Pavlokoma. Work in the more industrialized European countries, especially Germany, attracted the villagers on a seasonal basis. According to Friedrich Burgdörfer, «Reliable statistics of overland immigration also are lacking. It was not numerically important until towards the end of the nineteenth century, but then it developed from the East. Polish, Galician, and other alien laborers, at first as migratory workers and later as settlers, took the place of the German farm laborers who had emigrated overseas.»²²⁸

Immigrants to Galicia and Polish territories helped to shape the social, economic, religious, political, legal, and ethnic ²²⁶ Demographers, sociologists, and historians have applied several migration classifications in their studies. Mass migration involves the movement of large groups of individuals during a given period. Several examples of this type are described in Chapter 1. Voluntary and forced migration can involve choice or the lack of it. Migration can be local, internal, or international. Chain migration occurred when a few individuals left Pavlokoma and others later followed these pioneers, usually to a specific area. Some individuals chose to return to their native village.

structure of the many villages on the Carpathian slopes, including Pavlokoma. Russian and Ukrainian influences from the east, Prussian migration from the west, and Hungarian and Austrian monarchs all participated in the formation of the Polish territories during the sixteenth to twentieth centuries. The impact of the three partitions of Poland in the late eighteenth century changed the migration dynamics.

The decline of the feudal structure increased migration opportunities, fueled by stories from returning military conscripts that better economic conditions existed beyond the village. Historians suggest that early migrants used the river systems to their advantage. Galicia's rivers became arteries of commerce in feudal times and provided opportunities for peasants to become raftsmen in the lucrative grain trade. Keely Stauter-Halsted has argued that «By the nineteenth century, raftsmen were among the most knowledgeable about the rivers and towns of the Old Polish Kingdom. They brought artifacts and stories from distant lands to their native villages, introducing their neighbours to German cloth, furs, coral and tea. The rafting tradition also brought the village closer to events in the outside world.»²²⁹ Pavlokoma's villagers could have been influenced by or participated directly with travellers along the San and Wisła Rivers.

Under feudalism, peasants had few means to leave the manor and thus improve their economic condition. According to G. Burnet: «They [were] not privileged to quit the soil, except in a few instances of complete enfranchisement; and if they were, the privilege, for the most part, would be merely nominal; for whither should they go?»²³⁰ With the abolition of feudalism serfdom throughout the Habsburg Empire in 1848, the mobility of peasants who became less economically tied to the landowners increased. Migration, seasonal or otherwise, to elsewhere in Galicia and other western countries became increasingly popular.

Hatton and Williamson have written that before 1914 European mass emigration was «relatively unconstrained by policy intervention,»²³¹ but that it was economically too difficult for individuals to migrate from the poorest regions.

Non-economic factors also come into play on the decision to emigrate, including the influence of individuals who had made the effort earlier. The ship-manifest records in this study show us the migrants' destinations and their hosts or sponsors there. The immigrants' destinations, especially western Pennsylvania, suggest that those who arrived there routinely sent advice and instructions about immigrating to their counterparts still in Pavlokoma.²³²

9-2. Immigration from Pavlokoma to North America

Emigration from Pavlokoma began in earnest in the late nineteenth century continued until the outbreak of World War I in 1914. It has been referred to as the industrial-era immigration²³³ or as the first wave²³⁴ of immigrants from Galicia to Canada and the United States. The immigrants to Canada settled in Ontario around the Toronto area or took advantage of the offers of land in the western provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba and became farmers there.²³⁵ The immigrants from Pavlokoma who arrived in the United States settled mostly in Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

The immigrants funded the immigration of their fellow villagers by sending money home to Pavlokoma. For example, in 1908 Nicholas Petrowicz (Mykola Petrovych) and his cousin Paweł Trojan (Pavlo Troian) sent U.S. $290 (=1,410 kronen) to three individuals in Pavlokoma, perhaps to reimburse them for the money they had loaned Petrowicz and Trojan for their journeys.

²³² An interesting example of chain migration was identified when over thirty immigrants from Pavlokoma listed in the ship manifest record stated that 38 Steuben Street in south Pittsburgh was their destination. However, the 1910 U.S. Census indicates that this location was a «vacant lot.»

Alternatively, perhaps the money was Petrowicz's and Trojan's loan to the three individuals for their journey to America. (Two of the recipients immigrated and settled in Pittsburgh in 1913.) Immigrants transferring funds back to their home village was a common practice before 1914. They frequently wrote to their family members in the village to enquire about conditions there, transferred money to them, and requested that others make the journey.²³⁶

Galicia to offer potential emigrants special deals if they signed up for the journey to the Americas. Many of Pavlokoma's villagers likely accepted their offers and travelled to the ports of Hamburg and Bremen to begin the voyage to America, Canada, or later, in the 1930s, South America. The earliest recorded immigrants to America from Pavlokoma arrived in Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and later migrated to Pittsburgh. Letters were sent back to Pavlokoma advising later arrivals of their destination address, port, and ships²³⁸ to depart from, and how to manage the issues they would encounter at the port of entry. The earliest recorded arrival of a villager from Pavlokoma in the United States occurred in 1897, though others may have arrived earlier. Unfortunately, early manifest records did not include the village an immigrant came from or even the specific destination.

Shipping companies advertised heavily during late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Recruiters working for various industries routinely travelled throughout Europe to offer individuals jobs in American mines and mills that hungered for the cheap labour the villagers could provide.

The first wave immigrants travelled from their port of arrival to their final destination to meet mostly relatives and friends. The early arrivals from Pavlokoma initially settled in Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and then later migrated to Pittsburgh's southside area and nearby McKees Rocks. Most of them found employment in the mills and mines scattered throughout western Pennsylvania. The textile mills of New England also attracted a few of the new immigrants, and several who had arrived at the port of New Orleans travelled to Texas, where they became farmers.

We obtained immigration data from several sources, most of which provide information about the arrivals at their destination. The documents about arrivals in Canada and the United States are generally available in state and national archives. Census records are also excellent detailed sources. Secondary American sources include draft records during both world wars, naturalization documents, passport applications, marriage and death records (both civil and church), obituaries, and funeral-home records.

A certain percentage of the immigrants returned to their native village and must be accounted for when evaluating demographic population trends. At least thirty-nine individuals made multiple visits back to Pavlokoma.

for determining who these individuals were may be British incoming and outgoing ship records. We have thus located several individuals from Pavlokoma.

The Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation (SOLEIF)²⁴² has provided access to the ship-manifest records of immigrants during the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries, including many from Pavlokoma. Each manifest sheet contains the names of 30 immigrants filled out at the port of debarkation. The name and address of the person(s) who would be hosting the immigrant at his/her destination was listed.²⁴³ These records contain much more information than just the immigrant's name, age, arrival date, gender, destination, marital status, and home village. As of 1907 the ship manifests²⁴⁴ included additional information such as the names and addresses of contacts in immigrants' last place of residence and the immigrant's general appearance, height, and eye and hair colour. The ship-manifest spreadsheet we developed for the immigrants from Pavlokoma includes both American Soundex numbers and PPINs in order to facilitate linkages with the various other demographic spreadsheets developed for and in this book.

²⁴³ Precautions must be taken to make sure that the relationship indicated on the manifest is accurate, especially if an immigrant states he/she is coming to see their brother when, in reality, it is their cousin. The confusion arises from the Ukrainian word for «cousin»— «dvoiyridnyi brat» (двоюрідний брат). The word «brother» (брат) is used instead on the manifest, as was the case when Teodor Petrowicz arrived to visit his cousin Nicholas Petrowicz in 1907.

²⁴⁴ Beginning in 1907 a second manifest sheet was provided and often included the names of immigrants' parents or grandparents.

9-3. The Decline of the First Wave of Immigration

American industrialists welcomed the first wave of immigrants from eastern and southern Europe and sent agents to recruit more of them to work in the mills and mines as unskilled labourers and strikebreakers. The attitudes of politicians and their constituents regarding immigrants began changing in the first decade of the twentieth century. Progressives in the U.S. Congress began enacting legislation to limit immigrants from eastern and southern Europe and the Far East. A Senate body—the Dillingham Commission²⁴⁸—undertook a detailed review of immigration from 1907 to 1911. The commission's 41 volumes laid the foundation for the Immigration Act of 1924,²⁴⁹ also known as the Reed-Johnson Act. The act had profound impact on immigration from the Slavic countries, including from Pavlokoma, owing to the inclusion of a two-per cent quota based on the 1890 U.S. census. A wave of nativism was also fueled by the Bolshevik Revolution, the First Red Scare,²⁵⁰ and the subsequent Palmer Raids.²⁵¹ All of these events played their part in stirring up xenophobic²⁵² and anti-Communist fears. White, Protestant American citizens and politicians were among those most intolerant of East European immigrants. Together these acts and attitudes marked the end of an era.²⁵³ Figure 9-4, which was generated from immigration records, shows the impact that these acts had on the first wave of immigration from Pavlokoma to the United States.

World events also reduced immigration to Canada, the United States, and other parts of the globe. During World War I, immigrants from Pavlokoma were identified as enemy aliens because they had been citizens of the Habsburg Empire. The Russian Revolution of 1917 further inhibited immigration from Eastern Europe. The immigration of villagers from Pavlokoma to other parts of the globe continued after the quota system was imposed in the United States. Some went to Canada during the years of 1910 to 1930, while South America, particularly to Argentina, Brazil,²⁵⁴ Paraguay,²⁵⁵ and Uruguay, became their destination in the 1930s.

9-4 Forced Migration

With the military invasion and conquest of Poland by both Nazi Germany and the USSR in 1939, the ensuing period of the Second World War and through 1947 was the most dramatic and catastrophic for all of Pavlokoma's villagers. Increased ethnic tensions between the village's Ukrainian and Polish inhabitants further exacerbated the situation.

After the invasion of Poland in 1939, many of Pavlokoma's Ukrainian, Polish, and Jewish villagers were deported to work camps in the Third Reich or Siberia. Some were incarcerated in Nazi concentration camps. The NKVD (Soviet secret police) forcibly shipped the Polish villagers to Siberia or Kazakhstan. Several Ukrainians were arrested (including Peter J. Potichnyj's father), and a few of them were executed without a court trial or conviction.²⁵⁶

The end of the war in 1945 did not make life easier for Pavlokoma's Ukrainians. Atrocities continued, particularly the massacre of 366 of the village's Ukrainian inhabitants on 3 March 1945. Most of Pavlokoma's surviving Ukrainians were forcibly resettled in Soviet Ukraine immediately after the massacre. The final act of the destruction of Pavlokoma as a Ukrainian village came in October 1945, when UPA soldiers burned down the houses vacated by the Ukrainian villagers to prevent Poles to occupy them.

Two years later, during the Akcja Wisła, which began on 28 April 1947, the Polish Communist regime forced the Ukrainian villagers who had managed to survive the 1945 massacre to leave their ancestral homes and deported them to live in Soviet Ukraine or the former German territories that postwar Poland now occupied. The Germans, who had lived on those territories for centuries, were expelled and forced to immigrate to Germany.

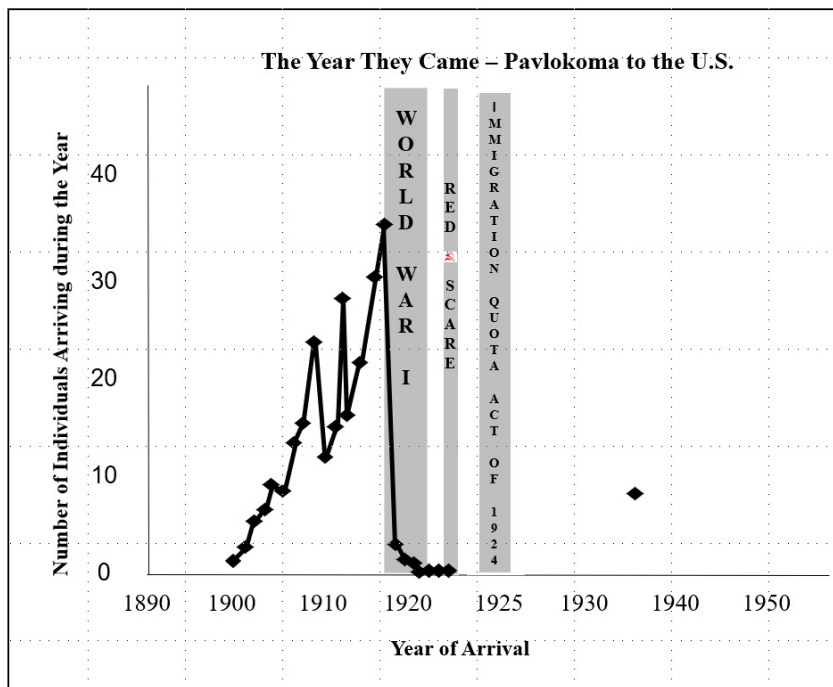

Figure 9-5. Immigration from Pavlokoma to the United States

Tens of thousands of Ukrainians whom the Germans had taken to work in the Third Reich or elsewhere outside Poland during the war were unable or refused to return home once the USSR occupied all of Poland in 1945. Many of them found refuge in the displaced persons camps established in the American, British, and French occupation zones of postwar Germany and Austria. From there they were eventually permitted to immigrate to the Western countries that accepted the postwar refugees.²⁵⁷ Several such displaced persons were from Pavlokoma. Their names can be found in the archival and immigration records of their host countries—Canada, Australia, the United States, and the United Kingdom.

The Soviet Stalinist regime was equally brutal in its treatment of Pavlokoma's villagers, both Polish and Ukrainian. Several of Pavlokoma's Polish families were deported to Siberia or Kazakhstan during the Soviet occupation. Among them was the Wrotniak family, whose tribulations are recounted by a daughter who survived the forced march from Siberia to Iran and then immigrated to New Zealand, where she eventually became a Roman Catholic nun.²⁵⁹ The Soviets also forced villagers to serve in the Red Army.

9-5. The Migration Workbook

The Migration Record workbook contains four sheets: a data dictionary (Sheet 1), the Ship-Manifest Records (Sheet 2), the Ship-Manifest Analysis (Sheet 3), and the Ship-Manifest Analysis Results (Sheet 4). The data dictionary describes each field name; not every field will be listed in this book, but they will exist in digital form.

The ship-manifest spreadsheet was developed to identify the firstwave immigrants to the United States. A PPIN based on the passenger's surname was the primary linkage method used to link to other demographic spreadsheets. Surnames listed on the ship manifest are often misspelled, missing altogether, or with the given name and surname inverted. These errors or misspellings were not corrected whenever data was added to the spreadsheet. This approach was maintained so that researchers could find the manifest names in the future. The co-authors dealt with the surname issue by adding a Soundex-number column with standardized surnames.

9-6. Migration Analysis

Our collection contains 628 ship-manifest records ranging by dates of arrival from 1897 to 1917. The seasons when the migrants from Pavlokoma chose to immigrate were 126 during the winter months, 124 in the spring, 76 in the summer, and 88 in the autumn. The oldest male to migrate was 49 years old; the oldest female was 48 years old. Most of the males listed their occupation as either farmers or labourers, while females were usually listed as household servants. Their age distribution upon arrival is listed below.

Table 9-4. Age Distribution by Gender²⁶⁰

Females			Males
Age	Number	Average Age	Age	Number	Average Age
<10	29	2.5	< 10	31	3.8
10–20	3	12.0	10–20	8	14.25
20–40	2	30.5	20–40	4	28.5

²⁶⁰ Table 9-2 is based on the ship-manifest records (Appendix 4).

The information on ship manifests includes 118 of the male immigrants who declared they were single; 131, married; 1, a widower; and 55 who did not indicate their marital status. Among the female immigrants, 109 declared they were single; 22, married, 2, widows; and 9 did not indicate their marital status.²⁶¹

As we stated earlier, evaluation of international migration data will assist researchers studying population change and aid them to conduct family-reconstitution and life-course studies. The migration of Pavlokoma's villagers as representatives of the first wave of Ukrainian immigrants can serve as a bridge to link their demographic profiles to those of their kin in the diaspora. The migrants and their descendants can be studied by examining Canadian and U.S. census records and a host of other civil and parish records.

The techniques used to develop individual PPINs, ethnicity and religion for this micro data set can be helpful when linked to the macro data sets generated by the U.S. census records. Linkage of the first wave immigrants' data with the birth, death, and marriage records identifies the individual's ethnicity and religion. Linkage with the manifest records, on the other hand, does not divulge the individual's religion and may not clearly identify their nationality or language spoken.

CHAPTER 10: OBSERVATIONS AND ANALYSES

10-1. Observations

During the writing of our book, we came to the realization that there was a dearth of published historical demography studies relating to communities in Eastern Europe. This situation was true for villages in the Austro-Hungarian Empire, in Poland, and specifically the Ukrainian village of Pavlokoma. The reason we wrote The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma was to correct this shortcoming for our ancestors' village.

Our primary goal was to present as diverse a readership as possible with enough historical and demographic information about Pavlokoma. Throughout the book we have identified various data sources that have supported the scope of our historical demographic research. Dennis Willigan and Katherine Lynch summarized the purpose of historical demography by stating that «it is clear that an understanding of the cases and consequences of these processes can occur on many levels and from a wide variety of perspectives.»²⁶² Their observations prompted us to limit the scope of this book while recognizing that various readers and researchers will focus their attention on topics suiting their interests. Some will want to go into depths that are clearly beyond the scope of this book. Others may simply want to extract only relevant information about their families.

We faced difficulties in locating and accessing the parish and civil records of Pavlokoma's Greek Catholic villagers, and even more so of the village's Roman Catholic inhabitants. The breakup of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and the ravages of both World Wars resulted in the scattering of both archival and civil records throughout Europe and Russia. Many were destroyed or lost to public scrutiny as a result of these historical events. Our challenge was overcoming these shortcomings by locating alternative record sources providing the surnames and birthdates of as many Pavlokoma villagers as possible.

Our demographic study of Pavlokoma had to be limited to two general research approaches—of scope and depth. Our scope was limited regarding population change, fertility, nuptiality, aging, and mortality. Each of these subjects require in-depth research at levels beyond what we intended in writing this book. We have had to limit our discussion to an introductory or generalized survey. Despite these limitations, we believe that we have provided enough details and guidance to help readers to find in-depth historical demographic sources. We introduced several statistical and mathematical methods and techniques that historical demographers use; identified the methodologies applied in cross-sectional and longitudinal studies; and explained the approaches for accomplishing data linkage and using personal identification algorithms while recognizing that our readers have various mathematical, statistical, and computer-technology interests and skill levels.

We made an effort to describe the daily routines of Pavlokoma's villagers and to provide details of the physical appearance of the village and the homes they lived in. Few documents or photographs describing these structures exist. Even rarer are photographs of the interiors of the houses in Pavlokoma. Documents that describe the villagers' daily activities or routines are also scarce. Information about these subjects is of value to historians, sociologists, and demographers trying to understand the preindustrial, agrarian society.

Very little archaeological information about the history of Pavlokoma exists, except for a few minor artifacts. Evidence of pre-Christian burial methods, skeletal remains, pottery fragments, or building foundations that could help define the cultural aspects of past inhabitants in and around the area of Pavlokoma do not exist. Neither do artifacts from more recent events, such as the interment of the slain Ukrainians and the destruction of the village in 1945. The availability of such materials would enhance both the historical and demographic profiles of Pavlokoma.

10-2. Missing Parish Records

Significant blocks of missing parish information created challenges in our attempt to create as complete a picture of Pavlokoma's population before 1945. Records were sent from Pavlokoma to the Roman Catholic diocese office in Przemyśl every January. Figure 10-1 indicates the intervals when Greek Catholic metrical records are unavailable.

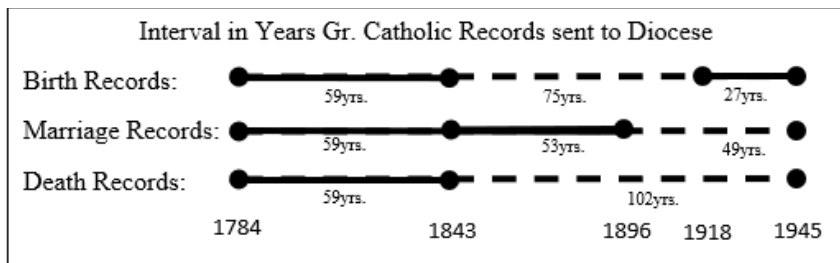

Figure 10-1 The Years When Greek Catholic Records Are Available or Missing

After 1784 Emperor Joseph II required Catholic clergy to make civil transcripts of church records in the Austrian Partition and to do so in a standardized Latin columnar form. In 1772 Austria took possession of the southern part of Poland, and in 1782 laws were introduced establishing Catholic priests as civil registrars. Two years later, Joseph II issued an edict that required Catholic clergy to make civil transcripts of church records. The Catholic parish registers were designated state records, and a standardized Latin columnar form was issued. The parish register thus became the official register of births, marriages, and deaths. A transcript (duplicate) was made for state purposes. Separate registers were required for each village in the parish. Greek Catholic and Roman Catholic clergy were responsible for the registration of all vital records for all religions; Protestants were permitted to keep their own registers under the direction of the Catholic priest. Jews were allowed the same privilege in 1789. In the mid 1800s non-Catholics, including Jews and Protestants, were made responsible for their own vital-record transcripts.

As mandated by the Josephinian decree, Pavlokoma's parish records were entered into a bound book by the parish priest who performed the ceremony. The whereabouts of the village's original parish record books are unknown. They may have been destroyed after the March 1945 massacre or sent to the civil-records office in Dynów. If they are in Dynów they will remain there for 100 years after the last book entry before being transferred to a state archive. This period of time is determined by Polish privacy law. For example, if the last entry in the Pavlokoma parish's book of birth records was made in 1945, the earliest that this document would be transferred to a state archive would be the year 2045.

Pavlokoma's birth, marriage, and death records made during the years 1784–1843 are digitally available online in columnar form. We obtained the marriage records made during the years 1844–1896²⁶³ from the State Archive in Przemyśl. The marriage records we were able to locate covered a 161-year span.

During our attempts to acquire the above records, we encountered political, ethnic, religious, and economic barriers. Several categories of civil records or archival fonds were inaccessible owing to current privacy laws of the Polish state and other governing bodies. Some local Polish authorities were also reluctant to share the Ukrainian records relating to what occurred in Pavlokoma during the 1940s. The corresponding sensitivities of the surviving Poles who participated in the war crimes, as well as of their children and other relatives, was also apparent.²⁶⁴ The current Polish residents of Pawłokoma are loath to discuss the «difficult past.»

Searching archives (cadasters), both locally or abroad, can be an expensive and time-consuming process. Fortunately, many sources can be searched online, and newly located records continue to appear more and more frequently because of the growing interest in genealogy.²⁶⁵

10-3. Record Substitution

When traditional parish records were unavailable, we relied on various civil, public, and personal records instead. The civil records included birth certificates, marriage applications and licenses, death records, citizenship applications, passport applications, military records, drivers' licenses, and displaced-persons records. The public records included newspaper articles, obituaries, magazine articles, city directories, and telephone books, to name a few. The personal records included family bibles, letters, postcards, insurance policies, wills, photographs, memoirs, personal diaries, tombstone inscriptions, fraternal-organization records, and tax returns.

In demographic research, census records are the most frequently used documents replacing or augmenting parish records. We were faced with a lack of comprehensive census records for the time period covered in our study. This shortfall required us to consider alternative means to complete population, fertility, and other cohort longitudinal studies. The method chosen was the development of the PPIN algorithm. The PPINs that we created permitted linkage to various spreadsheets and development of data that otherwise would have been obtained from official census records. Advances in spreadsheet technology allowed us to apply both deterministic and probabilistic approaches to our data linkage.

10-4. Analysis and Interpretation of the Data

We asked ourselves if our observations reflected the true demographic picture of Pavlokoma. We also asked whether we accurately portrayed the circumstances that had an impact on the villagers' lives. Demographers are sometimes reluctant to answer these questions and are often slow in drawing conclusions.²⁶⁶ Dominique Tabutin has concluded that demography «is a science in its own right which, by choice or necessity, has adapted to change and opened up to other disciplines.»²⁶⁷ Analyzing the Pavlokoma data set was our attempt to fulfill the requirements of historical demographers, as well as of other disciplines.

The birth-record spreadsheet contains over 3,500 records of individuals born in Pavlokoma. The birth records provided cohort statistics regarding gender, childhood health, family birth trends, and premature deaths among other analytical categories listed in the appendices.

The marriage-record spreadsheet contains 527 records that span the years 1784–1896. The Demographic data includes the ages of the brides and grooms at first marriage, their remarriage statistics, estimated birthdates, and information regarding the parents and sponsors. The records also provided data about migration to find a marriage partner.

The death-record spreadsheet, limited to 871 records spanning the years 1784–1843, provided a basis for demographic studies regarding morbidity and mortality. When linked to the other major workbooks, this data set also provided statistics on a variety of mortality-related issues among cohorts. The date and age when a person died were recorded. The names of their parents or spouse and the cause of death were often recorded in the parish death record.

²⁶⁷ Ibid., 15.

The neighbourhood spreadsheet contains a listing of over 2,000 individuals who lived in 80 various neighbourhoods in Pavlokoma. The information we obtained from this data set includes the demographic makeup of each neighbourhood in 1945, and the names of the individuals who were sent to the Third Reich as forced labourers, those captured by the Red Army, and those who joined the UPA. A variety of cohorts as well as life-course events were examined.

Our analysis of the 629 records in ship-manifest workbook contains information about the immigrants who journeyed from Pavlokoma to Canada and the United States in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Individual migration records provided estimates of the birthdates of those whose parish records were missing. This workbook is also the gateway to the many available data sources about members of the Pavlokoma diaspora and their descendants. The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma provides migratory data that future researchers can use to link to data found in various Canadian and U.S. census records and thus permit analyses of the descendants of those who migrated.

The Pavlokoma surname workbook serves to identify the various spellings of surnames of males who resided in Pavlokoma until 1945. The table also identifies which spelling was used to generate the American Soundex number, which in turn generated the PPIN.

10-5. Looking to the Future

We are optimistic that new sources of information will continue to be discovered and that their online access will improve. Development of new tools and techniques for collecting, linking, and analysing data should make the historical demographer's task less difficult. The growing field of DNA analysis will identify missing or distant relatives and should improve family-reconstitution efforts.

Our historical demographic study The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma should serve as a model for future researchers interested in other villages similar to Pavlokoma. We studied the past populations of Pavlokoma in ways traditionally defined by historical demographers, historians, sociologists, and genealogists. These and other associated researchers are challenged to look to the future and link firstwave populations like Pavlokoma's to the diaspora and future generations. Doing so will bridge the gap between the preindustrial, agrarian societies and modern, industrialized urban populations.

10-6. Data Access

The data contained in our appendices is not provided in either electronic or digital form. It is up to the individual researcher or reader to extract the information in their own way.

Large oak cross located on Dibrova Hill (about halfway up) facing Bachórzec and Chodorówka. The cross was a memorial to all deceased villagers and those who died in the struggle for Ukraine's freedom. The Poles strongly disliked the memorial and spread the rumour that it symbolized Poland's death. The village's Ukrainian priest blessed the cross, a wreath was placed on it, and memorial services were held there during which Ukraine's national anthem was sung. Appendix 9: Inheritance Case Files

Below are translated extracts of Polish legal documents for three inheritance files from Pawłokoma, including court records.²⁷⁵ Legal terms, spellings and abbreviations in some instances are not always recognized or understood. The value of the inheritance case files is two-fold. They provide insight regarding how inheritance issues were handled in Pavlokoma. Secondly the inheritance files are a source of names of individuals and family members born in Pavlokoma including family structure and their circumstances. Additional inheritance case files preserved at the Przemyśl State Archive are listed in Appendix 10.

1. Leib Brenner

Municipal Court in Dynów:

Signature No. 5: Files of the inheritance case of Leib Brenner of Pawłokoma, who died in 1916; dated (1924) and 1929–39.

Resolution: As the property is missing, the probate will not take place.

²⁷⁵ The inheritance case files were obtained from the State Archive in Przemyśl.

The report, which was created at the Municipal Court in Dynów on 28 October 1938:

Regina Brenner, the daughter of Leib from Pawłokoma, appeared and testifies that, after the death of Leib Brenner recte Bucksheim of Pawłokoma, in Pawłokoma there was left a section of the field in the expanse of 120 fathoms. (2) She asks for access to these acts stored within the Municipal Court in Jarosław, A. 284/24, as the proper ones, because Pełkinie belongs to the Municipal District Court in Jarosław, to supplement the inventory of the estate. In addition, she states that she does not know the dates of the field's cadastre. The land is maintained by a man named Cyla Königsberg. She [Brenner] was advised to submit the number of the mortgage register of the land in question within 2 weeks. (?) in Pełkinie.

Another document: With the inclusion of ts. Act A.284/24, please ask for an additional inheritance inventory remaining after Leib Brenner recte Buksheim of Pawłokoma, of which one-fifth of the property is included in vol. 32 of the book of the Greek Catholic community in Pełkinie consisting of pbud. 225 and pgr. 2087/1 and 2087/3. Further information will be provided by Regina Brenner of Pawłokoma, Dynów post.

Postcard: To Mr. Edward Raś, a notary public in Jarosław, in the matter of the transfer to Cps. 815/38 of the [estate of the] deceased Leib Brenner. We were informed that on 7 December 1938 the meeting regarding the deceased's estate will take place and that the documents will be recorded. I am asking you to hold a hearing with us, that is with Ozjasz and Ester, at the municipal court in Dynów. However, my sister Regina, who is currently in Cracow, will appear in person in Jarosław within the current month. Yours sincerely, Ozjasz Brenner.

Inventory of the estate: For the heirs of Leib Brenner recte Buksheim, the ownership of one-fifth of [his] realty enumerated in property book no 32 of the community of Pełkinie, consisting of p.gr.lk. 2087 1 2087/2 and b. 225, with a total area of about 800 s. On plot b. 225 there is an old wooden hut with a straw roof, consisting of a vestibule and 2 rooms, [with] an estimate[d] total [value], including the land, of 1,500 PLN [Polish zloty], of which a one-fifth share is 300 PLN

Minutes written on 2 January 1939; in the absence of calculating the passive state, a pure drop is PLN 300.

Minutes on 2 January 1939. The widow Chawa Brenner died in November 1938.

Osziasz Brenner is in Pawłokoma
Feiga Brenner is in The Hague
Rifka Brenner is in Pawłokoma
Estera Brenner is in Pawłokoma.

The remaining property in the inventory specified in Pełkinie located in the Judicial District of the area of Jarosław for around 800 s. Under the management of son Osiasz Brenner.

Separate declaration on the decline made on January 2, 1939:

I, Osiasz Brenner, and Ester Brenner hereby declare that we shall decline [to accept our] inheritance from Leiba Brenner recte Buksheim, recognized as deceased by resolution T.256/21, [and] who expired on 30 November 30, 1916, in favour of [our] sister Rifka Brenner.

Separate declaration of Feiga Brenner residing in the Netherlands:

I, Feiga Brenner, hereby declare that I decline [to accept my] inheritance from the late Leib Brenner recte Buksheim, recognized as deceased by resolution T.256/21, [and] who expired on 30 November 1916.

Inheritance decree: The Municipal Court in Dynów recognizes the estate left by the late Leib Brenner recte Buksheim, who was declared deceased by resolution T.256/21 of the District Court in Sanok [and] expired on 30 November 1916 without leaving a last will of the ordinance on the basis of inheritance from the act, and which, as a result of Osiasz Brenner and Ester Brenner relinquishing [their] inheritance to Rifka Brenner, and of Feiga Brenner conditionally declining [her inheritance], declares [the estate to be that of] the children of Rifka Brenner in its entirety; and thus [these] inheritance proceedings are considered to be completed.

2. Seńko Aftanas

Signature No. 151: The inheritance files of Seńko Aftanas of Pawłokoma, who died in 1920. [Date:] 1934.

Resolution: The district court W.I. in Sanok recognizes the late Seńko Aftanas of Pawłokoma, born on 4 March 1866, the son of Nykoła and Justyna. It is agreed that the deceased died on 19 March 1920.

Justification: On the basis of a certificate from the municipal office in Pawłokoma dated 26 January 1922 and on the basis of the sworn testimony of Jan Aftanas, who testified to the court that the Seńko had gone to Romania 46 years ago. On the basis of the sworn testimony of Salomeia Terlecka, nee [Aftanas] persuaded the court that the absentee [Terlecka] had lived with Seńko in Romania for 8 years 20 years ago and that he [Seńko] then had a serious lung illness from which there was no chance of recovery, the more so that he was a heavy drinker. When, within thirty years of the absentee's [Seńko's] birth and 10 years since his last message—the conditions of art. 24 n.c.—the court accepted the presumption of the absentee's death and ruled so in the text of its resolution.

The death certificate was created by order of the Municipal Court in Dynów of 1 May 1934.

Name and surname of the testator: Seńko Aftanas

Occupation: labourer

Age: 68

Religion: Greek Catholic

Marital status: unmarried

Place of residence: Pawłokoma

Date and place of death: he expired on 19 March 1920

He did not leave behind a wife or children.

First name and surname, occupation, age, and place of residence of the closest relatives.

father: Mikołaj Aftanas, deceased

[Mikołaj's] first wife Justyna Aftanas, née Kosztowska

[Justyna's] sister: Katarzyna Mudryk, née Aftanas, deceased; and her children Aniela Mudryk, 27, in Pawłokoma; Włodzimierz Mudryk, 23 in Pawłokoma; and Andrzej Mudryk, 22 in Pawłokoma

[Seńko's] brother Jan Aftanas, 63, in Pawłokoma

[Seńko's] brother Piotr Aftanas, 59, in America

[Seńko's] brother Andrzej Aftanas, 40, in America

[Mikołaj's] second wife Katarzyna Aftanas, née Pantola:

[Seńko's] half-brother Wojciech Aftanas, 48, in Pawłokoma

[Seńko's] half-brother Teodor Aftanas, 35, in Pawłokoma

[Seńko's] half-sister Aniela Aftanas in America

The mother Justyna Aftanas, née Kosztowska, died 30 years ago, and her children [sons] are mentioned above. The parties propose that the kurator [trustee] of absent Piotr Aftanas and Andrzej Aftanas be Agata Aftanas, Andrzej's wife, while Aniela Aftanas's trustee be Wojciech Aftanas. Agata Aftanas and Wojciech Aftanas have declared that they accept [this] responsibility and have taken the [appropriate] vow.

The remaining property in the inventory specified is a field with an area of about a half-morg and part of the building under the heirs' management.

Declaration on 19 May 1934: Aniela Mudryk, Andrzej Mudryk, Wojciech Aftanas, and Teodor Aftanas relinquish their shares of the late Seńko Aftanas's estate to January Aftanas, Agata Aftanas, and whereabouts unknown Piotr Aftanas and Andrzej Aftanas. On behalf of Aniela Aftanas, whose whereabouts are unknown, her trustee, Wojciech Aftanas, relinquishes her [share of the] estate.

We hereby declare that the inheritance from the late Senia [Seńko] Aftanas, the son of Mikołaj, who expired on 19 March 1920 without leaving a declaration of [his] last will, we [the undersigned] shall acquire, on the basis of statutory inheritance with legal benefit of the inventory:

Signed by Aniela Mudryk, Andrzej Mudryk, January Aftanas, Agata Aftanas, Wojciech Aftanas, and Teodor Aftanas.

Pawłokoma under the guardianship of [their] father, Michał Mudryk):

1. Eugenia, 12

2. Roman, 5

Is there a will, inheritance contract, or marriage contract?

She did not leave anything

Did she leave any property and what is it?

About a quarter-morg under the widowed husband's jurisdiction

The inheritance inventory:

I. Immovable property

The deceased was registered in the priest's office of the Pawłokoma community as the owner under the name Katarzyna Mudryk:

a. The entire real estate is obj.wkl. 822, consisting of pgr. 1574 / 6-1573
/ 3 and pbud. 223.

The value of the land, with an area of approx. half a morg, is PLN 300;
considering that one morg has a value of PLN 600.

b. On pbud. 223 a residential house was built. However, Michał Mudryk claims that this building is his property because he built it with his own money, and hence he is requesting it be excluded from the inheritance inventory.

II. Movable property

None

The active condition is 300 PLN; [and] the passive state is 20 PLN (funeral costs). The pure drop is 280 PLN.

Inheritance declaration: I, Michał Mudryk, decline my inheritance. And [my] children, Eugenia Mudryk and Roman Mudryk, shall receive what I have declined from the late Katarzyna Mudryk née Kucz, who died on 30 April 1937 in Pawłokoma without leaving a legal last will. On the basis of the statutory directive of inheritance with legal benefit to the inventory, I completely renounce the inheritance provision.

Decree granting the inheritance on 30 June 1937:

On 30 April 1937 the municipal court in Dynów allows the inheritance from the deceased in Pawłokoma, who did not leave a last will based upon the statutory order of inheritance, as a result of which Michał Mudryk has surrendered [his share] to the following heirs, who have accepted the inheritance with benefit of the [estate's] inventory—namely half each to [Michał's] underage children Eugenia Mudryk and Roman Mudryk—and thus the deceased's inheritance proceedings are [considered] completed.

4. Maria Kocioł [Kocyła?]

Signature no. 764: Files of the inheritance case of Maria Kocioł [Kocyła?], née Aftanas, from Pawłokoma, who died in 1938.

The descent act was written on 27 January 1939 in Dynów

Name of the testator: Maria Kocyła nee Aftanas

Religion: Roman Catholic

Status: widow of the late January

Place of residence: Pawłokoma

Date and place of death: 20 December 1938 in Pawłokoma

Surviving spouse: Michał Mudryk

Adult children and adult offspring of deceased children:

1. Józef Kocyła, 34, in Pawłokoma

2. Aniela Kocioł [Kocyła?], 30, in Pawłokoma

3. Antoni Kocyła, 27, in Pawłokoma.

Is there a will, inheritance contract, or marriage contract?

She did not leave anything.

Is there any property and what does it consist of?

The remaining property in the inventory specified for the area $\frac{1}{4}$ m². With part of the building under the management of Józef Kocyła.

The report was written in Dynów on 27 January 1939, by the signed (deputy) notary Teodor Lutk as the court commissioner in the probate case of the late Maria Kocyła née Aftanas, who died in Pawłokoma on 20 December 1938. [Present:] Józef, Aniela and Antoni Kocyła, [and] witnesses Stefan Czepelowski and Kazimiera Dżu. The parties after the notification brought the following:

Inheritance declaration:

Signed Józef Kocyła by my own name, I declare that I will renounce my inheritance to my brother Antoni Kocioł. I Antoni Kocyła, as directly as Józef Kocyła and Aniela Kocioł [Kocyła?], declare that we accept the entire inheritance from the late Maria Kocyła née Aftanas, who died in Pawłokoma on 20 December 1938 without leaving a legal last will, and, on the basis of the statutory order of inheritance with legal benefit to the inventory, we declare that we waive the delivery of the inheritance resolution in writing.

Inheritance inventory:

I. Non-verbal real estate:

The deceased was registered in the office of the Pawłokoma community's priest as the owner under the name of Maria Aftanas, daughter of Ignacy, of $\frac{1}{4}$ of the real estate, vol.whl.8.ks.gr. community Pawłokoma, consisting of pbud.lk. 143 and pgr.lk. 1177/3-1077/4-1177/6, 1178 2-1179/1-1303/2. The total area of the real estate of the sub-originator is, according to the pages, $\frac{1}{4}$ of a morg, and the value is given as 100 PLN.

II. Movable property—none remained.

The active condition is 100 PLN, and the passive state is 15 PLN (funeral costs). The pure drop is 85 PLN.

Inheritance decree of 15 March 1939:

The municipal court in Dynów admits the inheritance remaining after the death of Maria Aftanas, who died in Pawłokoma on 20 December 1938 without a last will of the ordinance, on the basis of inheritance of the act due to Józef Kocyla's relinquishment of [his] inheritance to Antoni Kocioł, on the condition that Aniela Kocioł shall receive a $\frac{1}{3}$ part and Antoni Kocyla $\frac{2}{3}$ parts, and the inheritance conduit is [thus] considered complete.

Appendix 11: Birth-Records Analysis Summary

Topic for Analysis	Comment
Number of Greek Catholics (GC) listed	3,456
Number of Roman Catholics (RC) listed	104
Number of Jews listed	6
Number of persons of unknown faith listed	1
Number of records	Female: 1,608, Male: 1,946
Gender ratio, based on the total number = (M/Fx100)	121

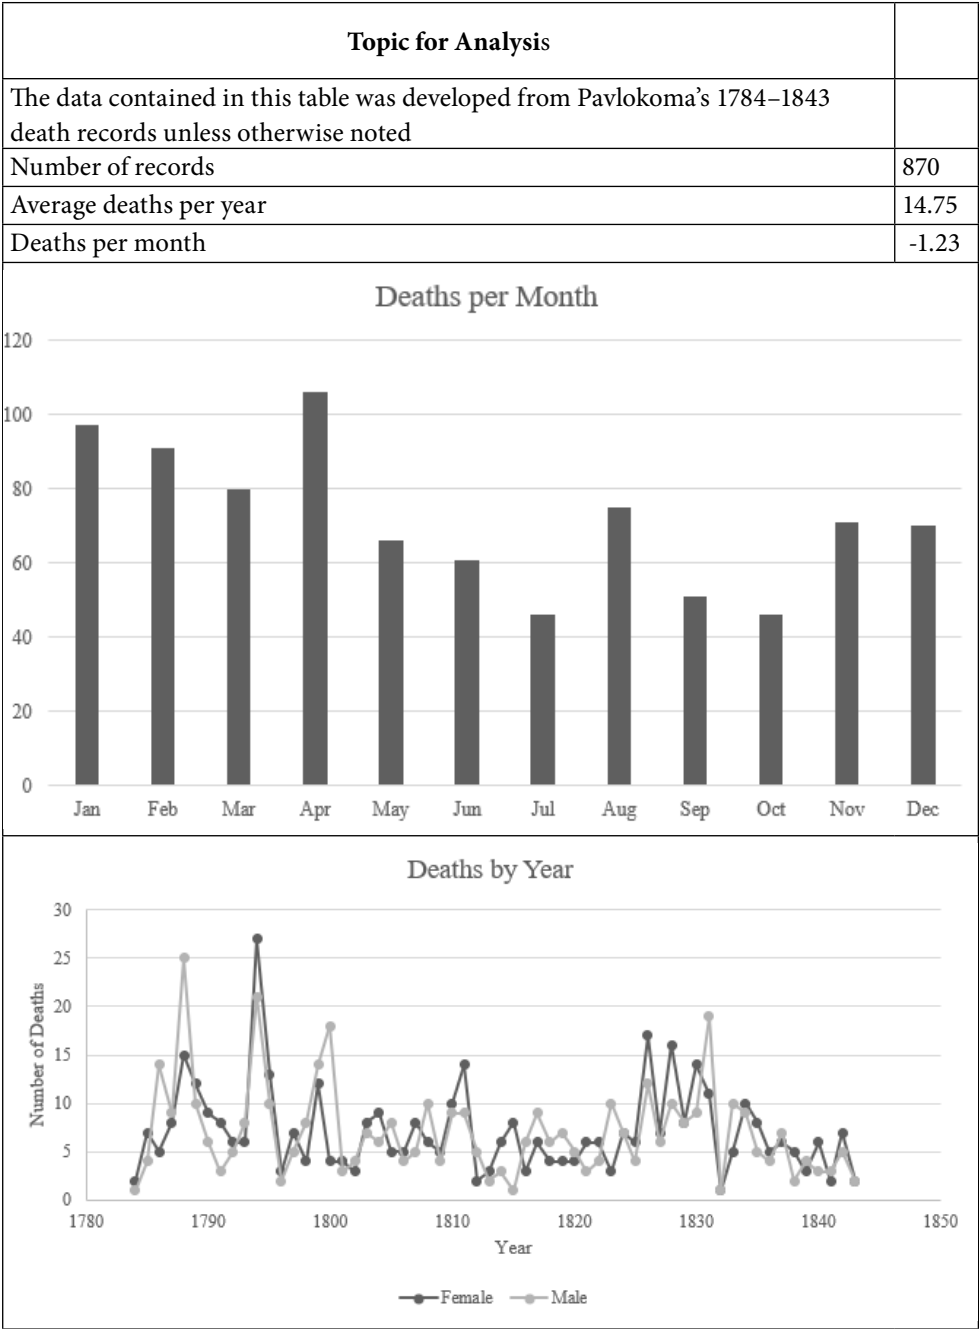

Midwives were named in most birth records. Further listings can be found in Potichnyi, Pavlokoma , 222–28. In the 1930s and 1940s some births took place at the hospital in Dynów.
Records of children born	3,567

Appendix 12: Marriage-Records Analysis Summary

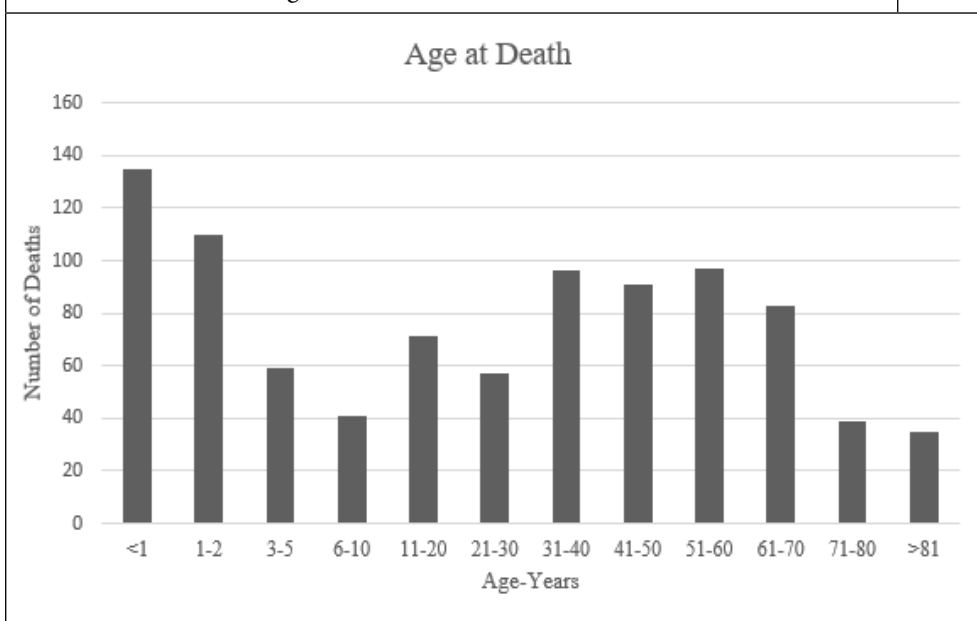

Topic for Analysis	Comment
The data used in the Marriage analyses is in Appendices 1 or 2 unless otherwise noted
Total number of marriage records.	527 in Appendix 2
Count the number of marriages per year and graph	Refer to Figure 6-6
The number of marriages in each month and graph	Refer to Figure 6-8. Most marriages occurred in October, November, and February. This was likely after completion of the harvest or before the spring planting season.
Estimated number of men who married	Listed in the marriage-data set are 519 grooms, of whom 59 (11.37%) had remarried.
Estimated number of women who married	Listed in the marriage data set are 525 brides, of whom 52 (9.9%) had remarried.
The youngest bride was 14 years old. The youngest grooms were 18.	Name: Barbara Jakimowa Several grooms married at the age of 18
The age of the oldest bride and groom when remarrying	The oldest groom to remarry was 56 years old. The oldest bride to remarry was 69. The next oldest bride was 64.
The average, maximum, and minimum ages of the brides and grooms	Grooms' first marriage age: 18–80 (average: 37.6) Grooms' remarriage age: 25–69 (average: 44.5) Brides' first marriage age: 14–51 (average: 30.7) Brides' remarriage age: 18–56 (average: 34.8)
Oldest male to marry: 80 years old	Record 197, PPIN N425PM749
Oldest female to marry: 56 years old	Record 518, N520MF838
Births per mother	The marriage records were sorted, the parents' PPINs were compared, and the number of children per couple was determined. The period that elapsed from the birth of the first child to the birth of the last was also estimated. The parent's PPINs were based on the birth of the first child's D.O.B. minus 27 years.

Example 1: Andreas and Catarina (née Mudryk) Aftanas. PPINs A135AM802P/ M362CF802P	5 children, born in 1829, 1829 (twins), 1833, and 1842. Years elapsed: 13 years
Example 2: Joannes and Tacianna (née Steć) Zenczak.	4 children, born in in 1807, 1810, 1811, and 1814. Years elapsed: 7.
Example 3: Antin and Kateryna (née Fedak) Lanchak. PPINs L522AM892P/ F320KF1892P	2 children (twins) born in 1919. Years elapsed: 0.
Example 4: Dmytro and Anna (née Marciniak) Vatsiak. PPINs W200DM900P/ M625AF900P	1 child in 1927
Evaluation of the entire data set would provide researchers with both fertility and fecundity information about the Pavlokoma birth cohort. Linkage of the birth, marriage, and neighbourhood spreadsheets could also provide information regarding the actual birthdates of many married couples.

Appendix 13: Death-Records Analysis Summary

No. of persons who died at the age of 80 or more.	16
Persons who died at the age of 90 or more	14
Persons who died at the age of 100 or more	3

A Brief History

On 3 March 1945, life in Pavlokoma for the Ukrainian villagers ended forever. In the dead of night soldiers of the Polish Home Army (Armija Krajowa, AK) entered the village, rounded up the Ukrainian villagers, and forced all of them into their church for interrogation. Then, as retribution for the alleged earlier actions of the Ukrainian Insurgent Army (UPA) in the region, the AK soldiers shot 366 of the Ukrainian men, women, and children. Their bodies were thrown into mass graves at the church cemetery. The survivors were forced to leave the village with just the clothes on their backs. They would no longer inhabit their ancestral homes or the northern slopes of their beloved Carpathian Mountains.

In 1947 the postwar Polish Communist government set out to complete the mass dispersion of the region's Ukrainians from their ancestral homelands. During the regime's Akcja Wisła (Operation Vistula), all of the Ukrainian villagers in the region bordering on Soviet Ukraine were forcibly evacuated from their homes and resettled in Soviet Ukraine or the territories of western Poland acquired from Germany after the war. Pavlokoma was one of a hundred villages that were erased of just about every reminder of the Ukrainian way of life in southeastern Poland. The village's Ukrainian Catholic church and public reading room were dismantled, and only the church's bell tower structure remained. A new Polish school was built on the other side of the village, and the cemetery that contained the mass graves of the murdered Ukrainian villagers was neglected and became overgrown.

The past can never be completely erased or forgotten, however. The massacre's survivors and their families dreamed that a memorial to honour those who perished would be erected some day. The Pavlokoma Foundation (Toronto, Canada) led the way, first by arranging to have a fence built around the old cemetery. The next step was to convince the Polish government to permit the creation of a memorial there. After years of painstaking negotiations, the government agreed. A major step toward Polish-Ukrainian reconciliation had been taken.

For years Pavlokoma's former residents and their relatives would gather at the cemetery to pray for their families and bless the hallowed ground where so many had been buried. Finally construction of a black granite memorial began in the autumn of 2005. Engraved in gold Cyrillic letters on its two winglike sides are the names and birthdates of the 366 villagers murdered in March 1945. A large, grey granite cross sits between the two wings. Inscribed in Polish and Ukrainian are descriptions of the tragic event. The formal blessing of the memorial was held in December 2005. Former villagers living in Ukraine and other countries participated in the service.

The official dedication of the memorial 13 May 2006 was attended by Presidents Lech Kaczyński of Poland and Viktor Yushchenko of Ukraine, as well as officials of the Polish Roman Catholic and Ukrainian Greek Catholic Churches. Canadian members of the deceased villagers' families flew in for the ceremony. Among them were Zenon Potichnyj, president of the Pavlokoma Foundation in Toronto, and his uncle Professor Peter J. Potichnyj, who presented each president with a copy of his comprehensive 2001 history of Pavlokoma as a formerly Ukrainian village.

Memories of the Pavlokoma massacre are still painful to many. However, it is hoped that they will find a way to forgive and that the Pavlokoma Memorial will help to bring the Ukrainian and Polish peoples closer together as neighbours and as allies against their common enemy.

The Ukrainian Village of Pavlokoma covers the period from 1441 -1945. Ukrainian villagers no longer live in their ancestral homes but are scattered throughout the world. The data collected for this book still finds relevance today as a case study for demographic research on the family structure of Ukrainian villages that existed in Poland during the 17th-20th centuries.

Українське село Павлокома охоплює період з 1441 по 1945 рік. Українські селяни вже не живуть у своїх родових оселях, а розкидані по всьому світу. Дані, зібрані для цієї книги, й сьогодні є актуальними як тематичне дослідження для демографічного дослідження сімейної структури українських сіл, що існували в Польщі протягом XVII-XX століть.
